A New Year Prayer — 5708

An ancient Rosh Hashonah prayer bound up with a dramatic ceremony serves as the text for this sacred hour when we usher in the year 5708. This prayer expresses the longing of our hearts and the mood of our souls as we face the perplexed world of our day.

As a prelude to the festival meal on the New Year in the traditional Jewish home, apple is dipped into honey and the following prayer announced: "Yehi Rotzon Milfonecho Adonoi Elohenu V'lohe Avosenu Shetchadesh Olenu Shono Tovo Umsuko": "May it be Thy will, O Lord our God and God of our fathers, that we be granted a new year, a good year and a sweet year."

Thus our deepest wish first is "Shetchadesh". This coming year should not be merely an added year to the stream of time but a year marked by a quality of living that will give zest and adventure and deep significance to our earthly pilgrimage. When we pray for a renewal of life we include the pronouncement of the poet:

"We live in deeds, not years, in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs.
He most lives who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

Renewal means also that we remove monotony from life. We often think, influenced by the financial civilization of our day, that the successful moneyed are the happiest. All of us recognize the value of money as a means and of its necessity for the comforts of life. But multitudes of the prosperous, alas, despite their financial success, find life a weariness. Behold the rich and see how they flee from one artificial outward pleasure to another in search of happiness which can only be found from within one's being.

Not only men and women of wealth but most of us of the so-called middle class experience weariness of soul. Yes, we of the middle stratum, in comparison with generations before us, live like kings in great comforts with which science has benefitted us. Perhaps all this and the fact that as we grow older we give up the spirit of adventure and the search for that which is new in thought and friendships, that our days are all the same without changes.

The humblest person can find freshness, youth and rebirth amid all circumstances in life if he is unselfish, if he beholds the beauty and glory of nature, and if he escapes from the over-absorption in his work which so often enslaves man. "Shetchadesh."

Grant us, O God, truly a year that will spell for us a renewal of life. That is our profound prayer on Rosh Hashonah 5708, that the heart be ever young and know love and dream dreams.

Not only do we pray for a renewal of life but we in this ancient prayer wish that the coming year be blessed with goodness. In the Jewish tradition a happy year can only be had if it is marked by goodness. No one can truly be happy in a society in which evil holds sway. Alas, our generation has witnessed so much cruelty.

Behold the increasing suspicions being built up by propaganda on all sides between nations of so-called East and West! Despite the increase of knowledge and that our world has shrunk physically, we find an increase of race hatred. The world throughout seems to be in an evil mood, indeed. We can not help being pessimistic because of the present realities of our post-war world.

If we are to know a happy year we must pray for a rebirth of goodness in our world. That, of course, calls for a dedication to comradeship and a return to sympathy and compassion and above all the recognition of conscience, "the still small voice", that summons us to do the right and to pursue the good. Now we need not look for a moral miracle during the coming year but we can hope for increased decency among men in the economic and political realms of life.

The entire message of Rosh Hashonah is the insistence upon a striving after the ethical without which mankind can never know joy. Thus we must pray that within us as individuals the ethical impulses grow stronger. For the good world can only come into being when the individual grows in goodness and in turn the nation to which that individual belongs.

Our ancient Rosh Hashonah benediction expresses the hope for a year that is new and good but also for a year that is sweet. Life is often unendurable because of a loss of savor and zest and hence bitterness overtakes us. Breathes there a man, no matter how saintly, who has not at some time rebelled against life's experiences? Failure results in anger. There is so much unfairness in the world about us. Disappointment, pain and sorrow, all these can easily embitter us unless we are motivated by great faith in the loving kindness of the Eternal. Why there is sorrow is still life's mystery.

Multitudes who gave of their sweat and blood in the cause of democracy stand today embittered. Where is this world "fit for heroes to dwell in" which they were promised when the allies would triumph over Nazi Germany? The ex-service men are naturally disillusioned as they have come home and found brotherlessness instead of comradeship, and instead of altruism, the usual selfishness.

As a people, we Jews have indeed become embittered though bitterness is contrary to our religious philosophy. As if it were not enough that six million of our precious brethren were done to death by the cruel Nazi barbarians, we now are face to face with victor nations who despite that two years have elapsed since the democratic victory, show no concern for the survivors of Hitler's crematoria. There they still languish in so-called D.P. camps on the broken continent of Europe!

We are more embittered today when we behold an England traditionally a friend of Israel, whose government in power has proven so cruel in handling the problem of Jewish Palestine and has broken sacred international pledges regarding its obligations as a mandatory power.

What the Nazis did to the Jews was sheer bestiality but what England is now doing is a cruel injustice and grieves us most because the English, we thought, were so akin to the concept of justice as taught by the Hebrew scriptures. The Jews have in the last fifty years built a goodly home in Palestine. Not only do we Jews claim Palestine because of our historic rights but by virtue of what we have miraculously created there. Verily, we

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor:
'Tho' for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor.'"

Rosh Hashonah, the Jewish New Year holiday, is a time of solemnity and awe as befits an occasion when all the inhabitants of the earth pass before the Creator for examination as sheep pass before the shepherd. This is the judgment day, the day whereon the fate of each individual is decreed for the coming year. It is unique in at least two things.

This day decides matters only for a year, not forever. Individual repentance and the wish for personal improvement enter in. Also this searching holiday did not develop as a possession for the Israelites alone. It is for all the inhabitants of the earth to present themselves for a cleansing examination so that all the children of the human family may derive the benefits accruing to a brotherhood.

On this particular Jewish New Year the Jews of the world have a right to urge the non-Jewish world to step forward and present itself to examination for its sins of omission and commission with regard to the Jews.

By a sudden and complete overthrow of Christian principles inherited from the Jews which had been taught for centuries, and through a retrogression into the darkest depths of barbarism which need not have happened save for the reluctance of civilization to intervene in time, millions of Jews were murdered and hundreds of thousands of their survivors were beggared and degraded. People who once had happy, prosperous and inviting homes now have none of any kind. No sort of restitution has been made for millions of dollars worth of property and the wicked flourish in the midst of looted goods while the victims have taken on the appearance of a burden which no nation wants to face.

Of these poor plundered people over two hundred thousand are called displaced persons. They are survivors of concentration camps, slave labor forces and ghettoes. Most of them live in remote camps in a state of lengthening despair. Although they are victims and not perpetrators, remember, they are cut off from the major currents of civilization. When they get mail it is after months have elapsed and the news they receive has passed into the bin of history. Time goes by and they become demoralized through months of [illegible] nothing to disturb horrible memories, crowded together and without the elementary privacy which decency demands. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. If thousands look busy training for jobs which they may never hold, there are other tens of thousands who are not being trained and who live in a vacuum where genius, talent, skill, all kinds of past training, experience and personality gifts go to waste.

In the face of this and much more, since it is not only Jews who are in displaced persons camps, the failure of the United States House of Representatives even to bring out of committee the Stratton Bill to admit 400,000 within the next four years at the rate of 100,000 a year was a calamity. This Bill had the support of President Truman and every federal official, of the great labor organizations and leading churchmen of the principal religious faiths. But the opposition was too stubborn and too concealed to be exposed squarely. So people who might have been saved were abandoned and robbed of hope as they have been stripped of everything else.

Another variety of robbery of Jews is going on in Europe, the robbery of children by conversion to Christianity. The Commission on the Status of Jewish War Orphans in Europe, in an appeal to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, estimated that forty thousand Jewish children are being held in foster homes where they were rescued from death at the hands of the Nazis.

In France and Belgium it is extremely difficult for the Jewish community to recover them because, although they are wards of the state, the foster parents do not have to register them. In Holland the surviving Jewish community is too small and too weak to cope with the struggle to get back the Jewish children and is being taken advantage of at every turn of a [illegible]. Some foster parents simply refuse to give up the children. During the years since they were first sheltered their names have been changed and the children have been assimilated into a Christian environment which refuses to cooperate with Jewish attempts to take them back. Even in England, where the Archbishop of Canterbury warned against the baptizing of Jewish war orphans, the process of purloining by conversion goes on. The United Nations is asked to propose that every country consider it a debt of honor to return the children to the faith of the murdered parents.

Great moral issues like these face the Christian world on the Jewish New Year, the day of judgment for all humanity. The readiness with which some members of that world, including the press, incite to violence against all the Jews for the vicious circle of reprisals in Palestine and seek to make every Jew in the world blameworthy for it shows a guilt complex in acute need of a scapegoat. The Gentile world has done too many inhuman things to the Jews to be at ease about it on the great judgment day when all the inhabitants of the earth must pass before the Creator for review.

Heartless exclusion, duplicity, outrage, shameless callousness toward the Jews put to severe test the sincerity of humanitarian and Christian professions of faith. Rosh Hashonah, the Jewish New Year, holds out hope to those who have soiled and damaged those professions but want to make amends. There is the penitential season for repentance and improvement if Christianity is to be saved. The only way out of its moral dilemma is to put into practice the brotherhood theme that it preaches. This is the price and there is no short cut.

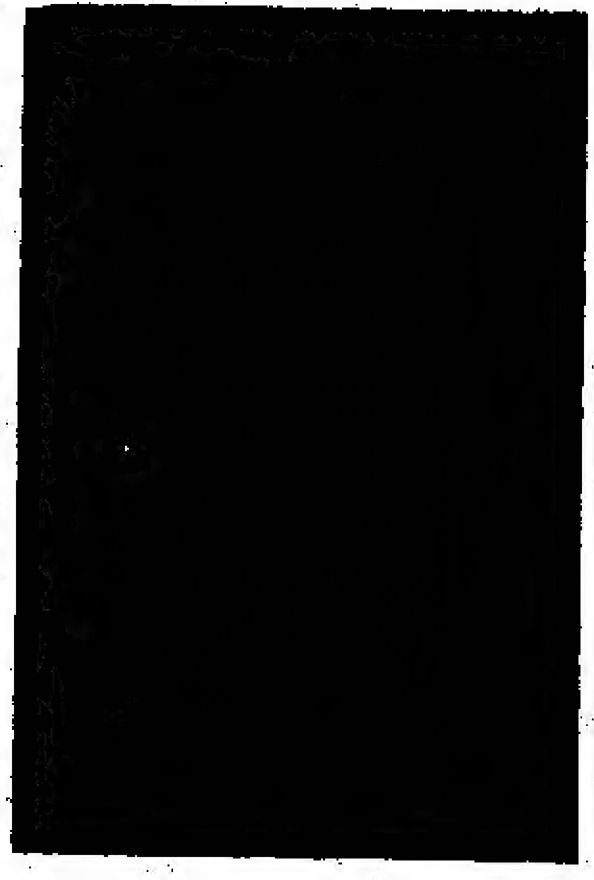
With Faith In The Ultimate Sense Of Justice

By Samuel Bronfman, Of Montreal, President Of The Canadian Jewish Congress

With the approach of the solemn holy days which usher in our New Year, many and solemn are the thoughts which must agitate the minds of our people.

Certainly Canadian Jewry would be unworthy of itself if it viewed with equanimity the tragic plight in which thousands of its brothers in Europe, fully two years after a war which was to bring the Four Freedoms to the four corners of the world, still find themselves. Displaced in camps that have no exit, misplaced in ships that have no destination, the pitiable remnant which miraculously survived the onslaught of Nazi terror, knows to-day of peace only by hearsay.



Samuel Bronfman, Montreal, President, Canadian Jewish Congress

—Copyright by Karsh

The great act of rectification which one expected from the world, the gesture which would in some measure atone for and correct the unspeakable ordeal to which our people had been subjected, failed to materialize. For all the participants in the world-wide conflict, schemes of rehabilitation are under way; even for the Germans there are the benefits of the Marshall plan; for the earliest and the most ravaged of the Nazi victims there are only the iron curtains of the displaced persons camps.

Apart from the Jewries in the British Commonwealths, in America, in France, and in some of the other democracies, our people finds itself in a sorry plight, indeed. Yet, though many are the dangers encompassing them, one danger, perhaps the greatest of all, is surely a danger which it lies in us to vanquish. That is the danger of despair. A year ago, on a similar occasion, we issued warning against giving way to this suicidal attitude. what we felt then, all know now: despair can lead only to destruction and shame. Despairing men are desperate men; and desperate men know not what they do.

Against despair, two weapons are paramount: first, our faith in God, in Him who has brought us through the long centuries to this point, and Who, though we stumbled, never let us fall. Whoever succumbs to despair thus would diminish from Providence; he fights our traditions. That is not our way; not the way of a people which is preparing for those annual religious services whose triple theme is The Supreme Monarchy of God, the Remembrance of Things Past, and the Trumpets of inevitable liberation.

Further militating against despair should be the knowledge that the problem of our people is not separate from, but a part of, the general problem of mankind. Not only we, but almost all of the nations of the earth live to-day in uncertainty; in international politics, suspicion and fear are the dominant motives; the presence of a new weapon has cast a shadow over the entire course of history, from the first Adam to the last atom.

Only when the realization that all mankind is one reaches men with the same impact as the realization that all the earth is atomizable, can there ensue a way out of this dreadful post-war impasse. Unless civilization is to end before it has hardly begun, such a way out must be found; and unless the way out provides for all peoples, including the Jewish people, it must prove but a blind alley.

Canadian Jewry, strong with the steadfastness of an ancient people, strong with the hope of a young country, is confident that in the fullness of time, such a solution will be found. It prays that that time may be fulfilled this coming year. With trust in God and faith in the ultimate sense of justice which must guide men, both for their salvation and their own interest, it faces the challenge of the future.

BIRKS

FOR THE COMMON GOOD: CO-OPERATION IN HUMANITARIAN ACTIVITY

By Donald B. Hurwitz, Executive Director, Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Montreal

At the beginning of a new year in Jewish life, it is customary to look backward to appraise the year gone by and, at the same time, to look forward and plan what might be done in the year ahead. This is the thirtieth year in which the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies has had an opportunity for such stocktaking. In those thirty years the Federation has achieved a position of great prestige and importance in the hearts and minds of the Jewish community. Through its galaxy of agencies which touches into the very heart of human life, Federation has become a part of the bloodstream of the Montreal Jewish community, [illegible] over again [illegible] its significance and value to all of us.

The Montreal Jewish community is one in which Jewish tradition and religious practice are of basic importance. The concept of helping our fellow-men is as old as the Jewish people, and is part of the fabric of our being. From the earliest days of Jewish life, we have historic evidence of an organized effort to provide help for those within the community who are unable to maintain themselves independently. The essence of democracy is found in this idea of the dignity and importance of the individual human being, and our various Federation agencies reflect this traditional respect for people, in the service which is rendered daily to our children, our aged, our indigent and our sick.

These services are literally of "cradle to grave" interest, from the care of children through the Jewish Child Welfare Bureau, to the care of the aged in the Montreal Hebrew Old People's Home. A recitation of the names of the Federation agencies is in itself a catalogue of the wide variety of assistance which the Montreal Jewish community provides for those in need in its midst. In addition to the two named above, there are the Baron de Hirsch Institute with its Family Welfare Department, Legal Aid and Cemetery; the Mount Sinai Sanatorium; Jewish Vocational Service; Herzl Dispensary; and the Neighbourhood House.

But, Federation, true as it is to the most respected traditions in Jewish life, is also modern in its methods of bringing help to people. Every effort is made to introduce the newest thinking and the newest practices in the field of social service in order to better fulfill the responsibilities which each of the agencies has undertaken. It should be borne in mind at all times that, parallel to the experience in other communities, there has been a gradual shift in the emphasis and work of these organizations.

It is no longer true, for example, that social agencies are exclusively devices through which "givers" bring help to "receivers." In many instances today, it would be difficult to distinguish between those who support, and those who receive service from our social agencies. Both directly and indirectly, the Federation is an organization bringing help to the entire community.

Quite obviously any programme which is designed to prevent delinquency; to combat the scourge of tuberculosis; to develop sound minds and healthy bodies; to protect our dependents; must constantly have an effect upon the security, strength, and moral standards of the total communal body. But, Beyond this, the agencies now number among their clientele a cross section of the Jewish community — men, women and children who come for service and not financial aid.

Vocational guidance, marriage counselling, recreational outlets and other Federation services know no distinction among people. Federation, then, is not merely a group of people in the community helping a less fortunate group, but an entire community helping itself. Federation is a combination of altruism and self-interest in Jewish tradition and tempered by modern methods of operation.

Federation also symbolizes another important idea in community living — the idea of co-operation, co-ordination, and an optimum use of the resources which the community is able to provide. Social agencies grew up historically as an answer to specific needs and problems. When children are in need, the community develops a way to help them. When old people are homeless, the community finds some way to make their declining days more comfortable. As a community grows, the size and the number of agencies normally grow with it. If there is no over-all planning, competition, conflict, and waste are the inevitable weeds that grow in the same soil.

Communities, however, have learned to fight these undesirable by-products of communal growth through central planning and co-ordination. In Montreal, a large degree of such co-ordination has been reached through Federation, which provides joint financing, joint purchasing, and joint planning for the variety of services mentioned above. But, there is still a long road to travel before we can say that we have achieved a complete central community organizational structure.

Constant effort is being made to improve our services and to achieve broader co-ordination. At the present moment, a survey is being made of four of our major summer camps with an eye towards better planning and greater efficiency. There is no reason why the same process cannot eventually be applied to other areas of our social services.

Federation is, in fact, the business agent of the Jewish community. Through its various organizations and committees, and in the last analysis, through its thousands of contributors, it can well be described in the words of Abraham Lincoln: "Of the people, for the people and by the people." Social change comes slowly. As social engineers within the community, Federation has undertaken a responsibility requiring intelligent and careful planning and execution.

If Jewish tradition is important; if modern thinking has merit; if there is value in providing service with a minimum of waste and conflict; then these social engineers are on the right track. How far we can go is dependent, in great measure, on good will, unselfish co-operation and sincerity, and limited only by our own human and natural resources. Knowing the resources of this community, I feel confident that our horizons are almost unlimited.

A further indication of the validity and soundness of the idea of co-ordination and co-operation is the Combined Jewish Appeal. The Federation, as is well known, was a primary instrument in the creation and development of this annual campaign which has now become a major means of expression of the understanding and compassion of our community.

MR. WOLFSON'S STAINED GLASS WINDOW

By S. N. Behrman

For some years the Croesus of Providence Street, Worcester, where I grew up, was Mr. Wolfson. He lived in a [illegible] ornate villa higher up the hill than the tenement houses we lived in and not far below the gates and [illegible] of the Worcester Academy, the [illegible] private school that crowned the hill. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfson lived in their villa all by themselves; in a street of multiple dwellings theirs was the only private house. Several of the richer Providence Street residents built houses in which they occupied half. These were double wooden houses with a separate stoop and entrance for each family. But Mr. Wolfson's mansion of unpainted concrete was all his own. It was a house around which one could build dreams. It had a turret and luxurious wings and a massive front door with curtained glass panels on each side and a polished brass electric push button, like a doctor's. Concrete battlements pierced by alternate square and diamond-shaped apertures circled the roof. But the magic and the wonder of Mr. Wolfson's mansion was that it had, instead of the customary parlor windows with their lace curtains on brass rods, a great, darkly resplendent oval of stained glass. The room with the oval window was itself oval in shape and it had in it an upright piano. The Wolfsons always referred to it proudly as "the music room." Neither of them played the piano and it is unlikely that they knew much about music; nevertheless, they were secure in the possession of the only music room on the hill. Mr. Wolfson's house, with its stained-glass window, was the Parthenon of Providence Street. Beyond the house and beyond the Academy was a country road called Lover's Lane. The older boys of the neighborhood used to take cherished out-of-town girls up to Lover's Lane (every out-of-town girl was cherished, regardless of her physical appearance) and on the way pause with pride in front of Mr. Wolfson's house and point out the stained-glass window. It never occurred to any of us to wonder what effect this multicolored jewel had on the light in Mr. Wolfson's parlor. We never reflected that the room might be gloomy; nothing about Mr. Wolfson could be anything but iridescent. He moved majestically up and down the hill in a nimbus of spectacular opulence.

Providence Street always referred to Mr. Wolfson as the Gvirr. A Gvirr was what we should now call a tycoon. Many Providence Street businessmen were referred to as Gvirrim, but Mr. Wolfson was, indisputably, the Gvirr. I remember hushed speculations about the extent of his fortune, ranging from bearish mutters of fifty thousand dollars to the flamboyant estimates of the bulls, who pronounced confidently that Mr. Wolfson must be worth two hundred thousand — probably because they enjoyed giving utterance to a figure so astronomical. Actually, it did not require much wealth on Providence Street to belong to the class of the Gvirrim. The term was applied somewhat loosely. For example, I remember going back to Worcester to visit my mother many years after the reign of Mr. Wolfson had ended. I inquired of the uncle with whom she then lived how his brother, who had formerly been his business partner, was getting on. I did not know that there had been a fierce quarrel between my uncles and that the two brothers were no longer speaking to each other, and was amazed at the flood of vituperation that followed my inquiry. I said I was sorry and, possibly to enlist sympathy for the hated uncle, I said that I had seen him that morning and that he had looked poorly. "Poorly!" cried his detractor vindictively. "He is a Gvirr. How can a Gvirr look poorly?" This astonished me. Certainly my other uncle, when I had met him that morning, had looked awfully shabby for a tycoon. I expressed skepticism. "Why," countered the embittered man jealously, "it is a well-known fact. In the real estate alone, he has four hundred dollars!" But Mr. Wolfson towered above such minor Croesi. He was the Gvirr.

Of all the Providence Street celebrities of my childhood, I can now see Mr. Wolfson the most clearly. I remember his sartorial elegance. In a community that, on weekdays, was not too meticulous about collars and ties, he was always sprucely dressed. He was a shortish, sallow man, with a militant, ginger-colored mustache, the ends of which he was always sharpening between thumb and forefinger, and he had ginger-colored hair, parted in the middle. His eyes, too, were yellowish — ophidian, incessantly darting about, with a look at once furtive and arrogant. He was a comb manufacturer, and he was the color of one of his own imitation-amber combs. I never remember seeing Mr. Wolfson smile; he was always grim. But since our lives in those days focussed in the Providence Street Synagogue, and since Mr. Wolfson, after an intense and scandalous campaign, became for a season its president, I remember him best as he was on Friday nights and Saturdays and high holidays, wearing the presidential regalia and sitting in state in a special armchair beside the Ark, opposite the rabbi. On these occasions, Mr. Wolfson wore a stovepipe silk hat, a Prince Albert coat, and striped trousers. The fabulous circumstance was that he owned these garments outright. In this, he was unique; in our circle, such garments were nearly always hired, and seldom used except for weddings.

I remember Mrs. Wolfson, too. She was a large, handsome woman and she had, in contrast to her husband, a ~~benign air. Once~~, Mrs. Wolfson went to Boston and came back in a new tweed suit. This suit was a nine days' wonder. Such a fabric as tweed had never appeared in our neighborhood before. The Wolfsons were the first people on Providence Street to own a car. It was a Winton Six. I remember being awakened, early on a summer morning, by a chum with the information that Mrs. Wolfson was going to Boston in her car. We ran up the hill and, sure enough, there was Mrs. Wolfson, in a straw hat and veil, a little Gioconda smile on her lips, getting into her car to be driven off to her summer holiday at Revere Beach, a resort near Boston. It seemed to me then that this outing of Mrs. Wolfson's represented the ultimate glamour that life could afford.

The Wolfsons were childless. As here was much jealousy of them even before the scandal over the coveted presidency, there were many standard, and ribald, jokes about this fact, most of which I did not then understand. Providence Street took its revenge for Mr. Wolfson's opulence by reflecting on his infertility. It was not only the Wolfson's wealth that made the gossip about them so invidious; it was also their social isolation. Their friends were all in Boston. They went constantly to see people in Boston; people from Boston came to see them. Neither my parents nor any of their friends ever visited the Wolfsons socially; they were never asked. I suppose that, like the Duke in Max Beerbohm's "Zuleika Dobson", Mr. Wolfson felt that there was simply no one on Providence Street qualified to join the Junta composed of himself and his wife. Some of our mothers occasionally got into the Wolfson house, though, when they went to solicit money for charity drives. They were always received by Mrs. Wolfson, who interviewed them graciously in the music room behind the stained-glass window. The visitors never went away empty-handed, but they invariably got the sense that their stay must terminate automatically with the bestowal of a check.

The scandal over Mr. Wolfson's accession to the presidency of the synagogue was a cause célèbre of my childhood. It would be difficult to convey to what degree the mental and spiritual life of Providence Street was obsessed by the idea

MY! WHAT A Beautiful Kitchen!

BEAUTIFUL yes—and practical, too. The floor is linoleum and there are linoleum tops on either side of the kitchen range and over the cupboards.

With linoleum—comfort, convenience and colour enter the kitchen. Floors are so much easier to walk on when they're cushioned with its restful resilience. Quickly and easily cleaned, it saves time and work, too. A waxing and polishing once a week, with light moppings in between, and linoleum keeps its bright, smart appearance indefinitely. And it's economical—wonderfully long-lasting—with low upkeep cost.

For every room in the house—The rich marble effects of Marboleum and the attractive plain colours of Dominion Battleship Linoleum offer a pleasing variety of choice to add charm and distinction to every room. Keep this in mind when planning your new home or remodelling your present one. Ask your architect or linoleum dealer for ideas and suggestions.

LINOLEUM is still in short supply

Due to shortages of essential materials, linoleum is still in short supply—but it's a good idea to plan NOW to incorporate its advantages in your home. Keep in touch with your linoleum dealer—he will be glad to advise you of the patterns and colours that are immediately available.

FOR BEAUTY ... RESILIENCE ... LONG LIFE

THE UNITED JEWISH WELFARE FUND OF TORONTO IS TEN YEARS OLD

By Miss Florence Hutner, Of Toronto, Executive Director

Mothered by necessity and nurtured by faith and good-will, the United Jewish Welfare Fund of Toronto has just celebrated its tenth year of activity. On June 17, over 400 members of the Toronto Jewish Community congregated in annual meeting and heard reports covering the ten years from 1937 to 1947.

The factual reports were impressive. The number of subscribers has grown from 2500 in the 1938 campaign to nearly 10,000 to the last one in the spring, 1947. Over a space of ten years, $3,900,000 has been raised for an increasing number of local, national and overseas agencies; the largest single amount realized in any campaign being $774,000 raised for this year's needs. The number of beneficiary agencies has grown from twelve in 1938 to 37 in 1947; although in 1944, ten local Jewish social welfare agencies were transferred to the local Community Chest for financial support.

These figures all showed growth in organization and in the support of the community; they bore witness to the growing sense of responsibility on the part of men and women who want to assist their community in its development and to aid their fellow-men who have been caught in the maelstrom of Hitlerism and war.

However, in reviewing the past ten years there are other criteria which can be applied; what have been the changes in the community caused by the Welfare Fund? Have these been good?

There have been many changes in communal life; social welfare agencies coming together under the agencies of the Welfare Fund have discovered mutual programs and formed amalgamations; studies of communal needs have lead to new agencies, and standards of local institutions have improved. In addition to being an effective, economical medium for raising funds, the Welfare Fund has contributed to the well-being and growth of the community.

The first three years were years of interpretation. The idea of one organization holding one campaign for a number of agencies had to be sold to the subscribing public; and the fears of losing their autonomy and the skepticism of agencies had to be broken down. The early leaders of the Welfare Fund gave unstintingly of their time in meetings, addresses to organizations, laying the foundations of good-will. The group of local-educational institutions which are members of the Welfare Fund, or the Educational Division, as it is known, met first in budget review, concerned only with financial matters. Gradually, as the Division became aware that sound spending can only be based on sound planning, it began to make studies of comparative costs per pupil among the schools, of teachers' salaries, et cetera.

At present, a survey of all Jewish Educational program and institutions in Toronto is being sponsored jointly by the Central Division of the Canadian Jewish Congress and by the Welfare Fund, with a city-wide Commission representing all groups and institutions, directing the study. This survey would never have been possible if it were not for the original coming together of the institutions under the Welfare Fund.

The opening of the Jewish Vocational Service this year was also under the auspices of the Welfare Fund which made the initial study leading to the formation of the services. During the past two years, the co-ordination of the Y. M. H. A. Camp "Northland", the Jewish Girls Camp, and Camp Bnai Brith for Boys has lead to one of the most progressive community camp programs on the continent, a camp program open to the entire community with fees based on ability to pay.

Building for the community and looking ahead to future needs, the Toronto Jewish community has during the past few years raised impressive amounts for a new Mount Sinai Hospital, a new Jewish Home for the Aged, and a building to house Centre and Y. M. H. A. activities. More funds will be needed before actual construction can be undertaken, and a more propitious time for building will have to be awaited, but the financial groundwork has been laid for community structures which will serve the community.

There is a Chinese adage which states that: "A fool builds for a day, a wise man for future years." The Welfare Fund of Toronto is not only meeting day-to-day problems of rising needs and costs by increasing campaign goals, but it is also building for the youth and family life of the community.

BNAI BRITH AS A UNIFYING FORCE

By J. I. Oelbaum, Of Toronto, President Of District Number One, Bnai Brith

On the eve of the High Holy Days, I welcome the opportunity of extending greetings to my fellow Canadian Jews and to the thousands of my associates in the work of Bnai Brith.

Bnai Brith has been considered by many as an "American" organization, and looked upon as foreign to Canada. This misconception is due to the fact that the Order originated in New York, its headquarters are presently in Washington, and its numerical strength is concentrated in the United States.

However, it is as much a Canadian institution as it is "American" and the fact that it functions not only in these two great countries but in many other countries of the world, points up with emphasis, not necessarily the international character of Bnai Brith, but its value and effectiveness as a unifying force in Jewish life.

The preamble to the constitution of Bnai Brith, adopted over one hundred years ago when the Order was formed, begins with the statement: "Bnai Brith has taken upon itself the mission of uniting Israelites in the work of promoting their highest interests and those of humanity." In carrying out this primary objective, Bnai Brith was so organized that it is and always has been a medium through which a platform has been furnished upon which Jews of all convictions, Orthodox, Reform, Conservative, Zionist and non-Zionist may meet upon common ground.

All that Bnai Brith asks is that one be a Jew and willing to labor for Judaism and humanity. It draws no distinction between those who hold different religious or political beliefs or between men of different origins or economic status.

I consider it a tribute not to myself, but to a substantial segment of Canadian Jewry, that I have been given the honor and responsibility of serving in the high office of President of District Number One, the bulk of whose membership resides in the New England and New York States, and only a small part of whose membership comes from Canada. It is a tribute to the outstanding participation of the Canadian members of Bnai Brith in the constructive and far-reaching program of the Order.

Just as the program of Bnai Brith embraces every phase of Jewish life to help the Jew become a useful member of the community, so the Canadian membership of Bnai Brith has participated actively, intensively and with honor and distinction in that program. The work of Canadian Bnai Brith in association with the Canadian

LEARNING TAILORING

ONTARIO'S productive capacity is the measure of her future prosperity. To assure the important tailoring industry a prominent place in the industrial life of the Province, trained hands are needed. Skill is important in the cutting, sewing, finishing and other branches of the industry. That is why veterans are being taught its various requirements ON THE JOB, by experts. The transition from apprenticeship to permanent employment means higher wages, job security and better working conditions.

Through plans sponsored by the Department of Veterans' Affairs and other agencies, hundreds of veterans have been trained in schools and ON THE JOB. They will acquire greater skill with further training and experience. Craftsmen of the future, they will have a share in Ontario's progress—an important part to play in her industrial development.

THE BREWING INDUSTRY (ONTARIO)

Jewish Congress in its public relations program has been eminently successful. Wherever anti-Semitism, discrimination or bigotry raises its ugly head, the Joint Public Relations Committee is active and measurably successful in its efforts to correct such conditions and abuses.

Bnai Brith of Eastern Canada, which is in District Number One may well be proud of its sponsorship of three outstanding Hillel Foundations at Montreal, Kingston, and Toronto. This is a community service which benefits the sons and daughters of both members and non-members of Bnai Brith. By its unique program, it instills a feeling of Jewishness in the college youth while they are away from home and trains them for future Jewish leadership.

The Bnai Brith Youth Organization (B.B.Y.O.) which guides and instructs our young people and aims to prepare them for the tremendous challenges which this generation of Jews must face, is well developed in Canada and embraces several thousand Canadian youth from one end of the Dominion to the other.

The War Services program of the Canadian lodges and chapters, which ante-dated a similar program carried out by the lodges and chapters south of the border, served with such outstanding merit that the overall war services program of Bnai Brith resulted in our having been the only civilian organization to receive citations from both the United States War Department and the United States Navy Department.

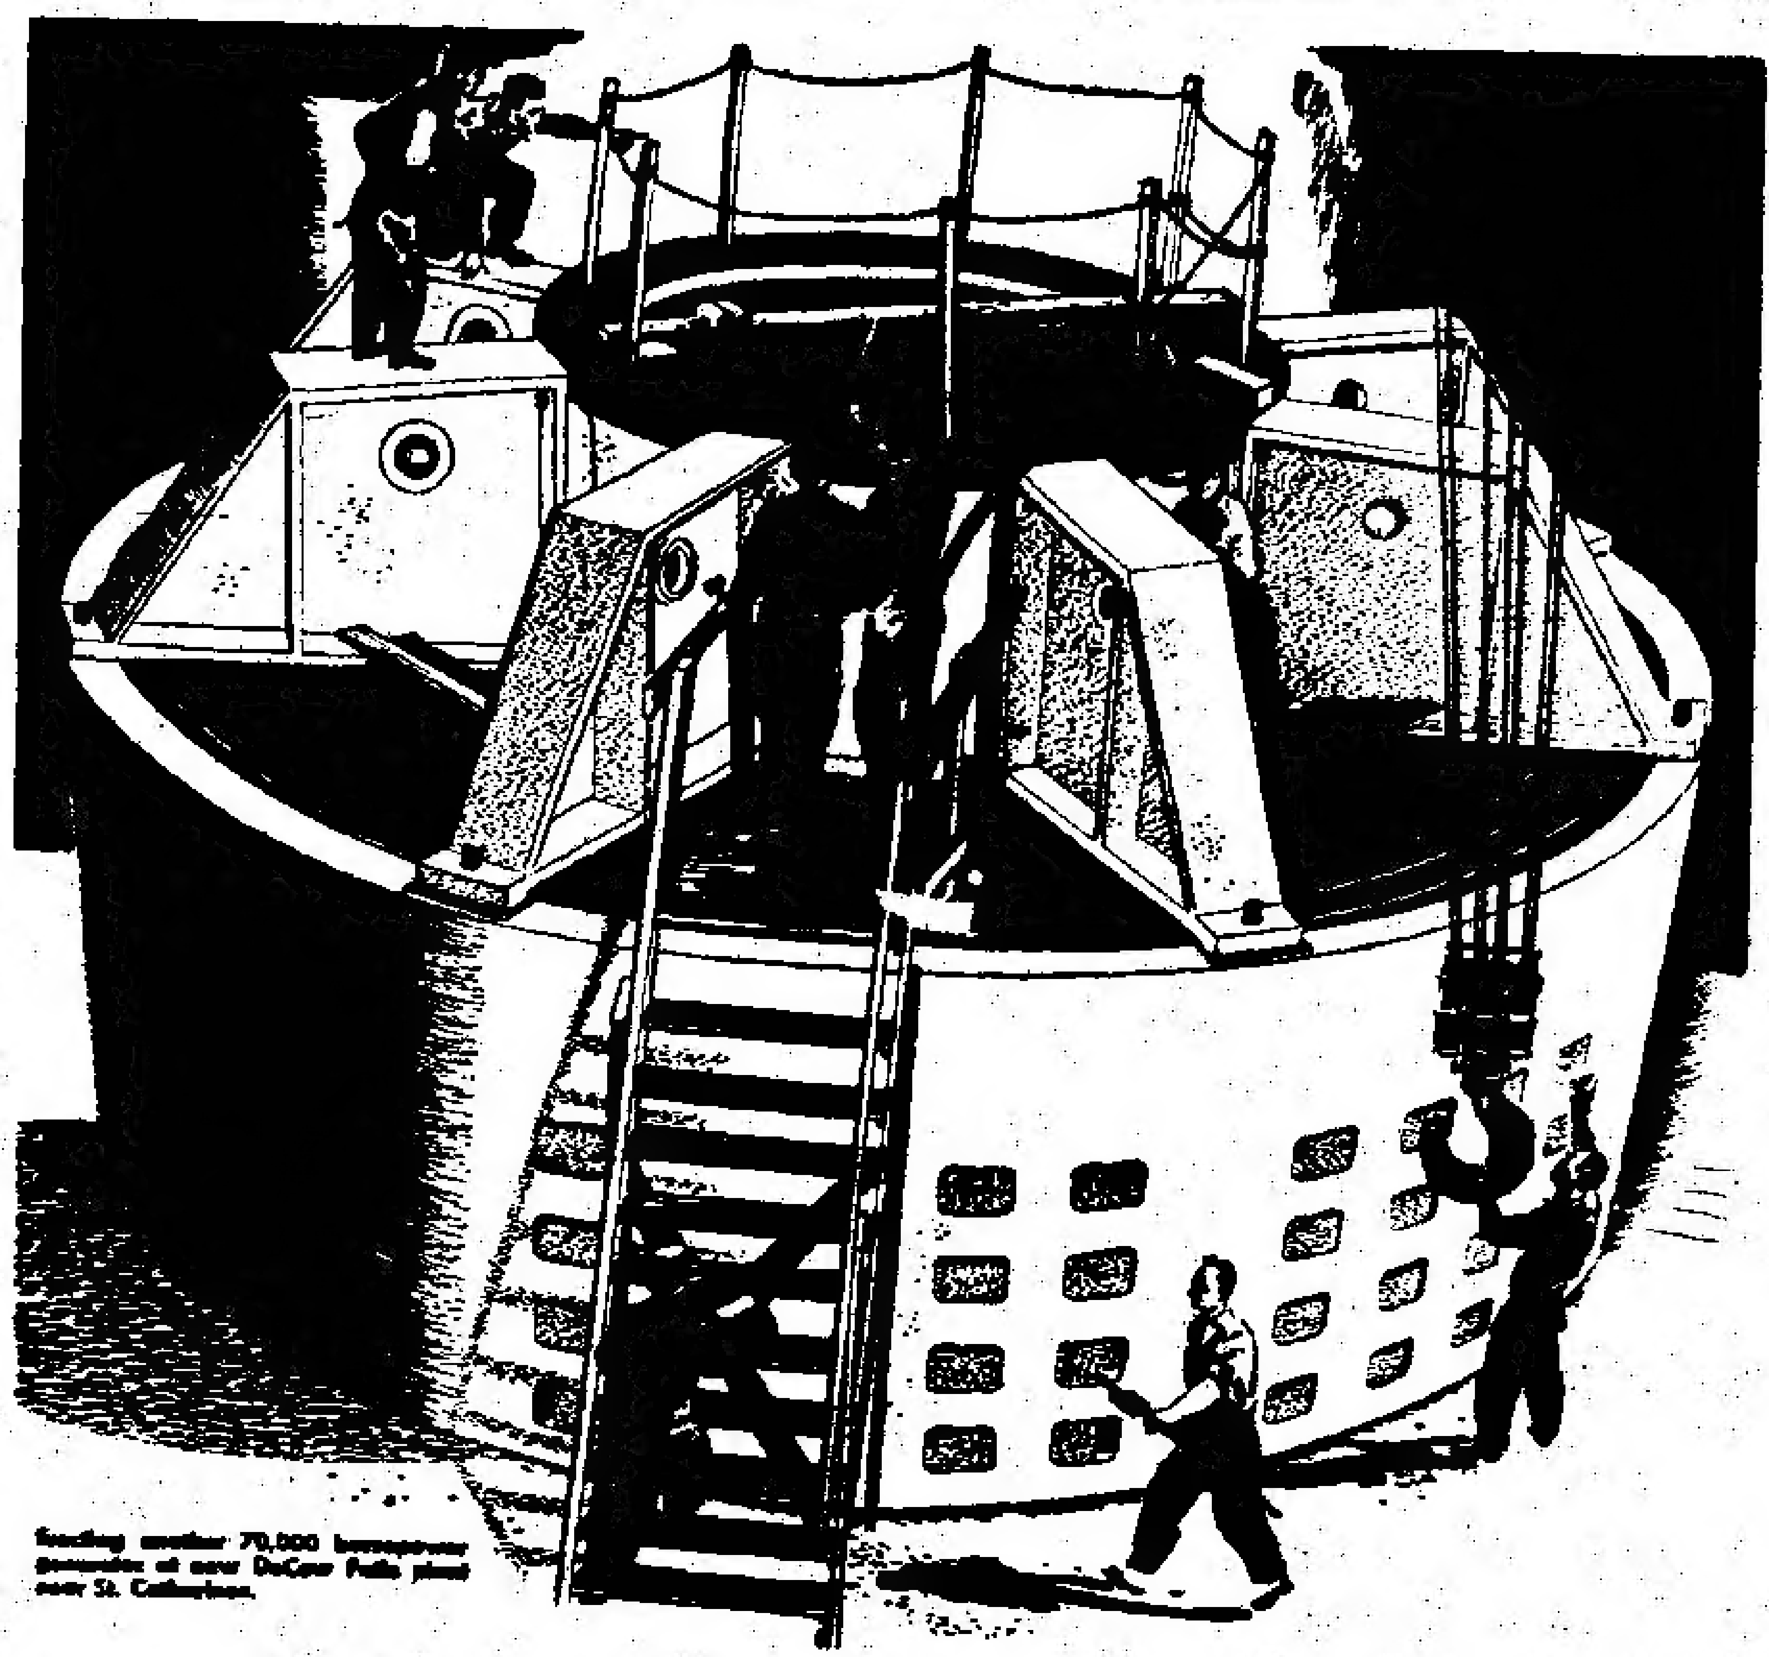
The Post-War Service program seeks to carry on with the determination that there shall be no recession of effort or organized planning in this important area of work, so that Bnai Brith will continue to hold the high place it won so deservedly in war-time years.

A fine example of the unifying force of Bnai Brith in Jewish life can be indicated by the American Jewish Conference, the first session of which was attended by a large number of distinguished Canadians as observers. No other organization in Jewish life could possibly have served as the medium through which all of the major Jewish organizations, many of them with diametrically opposite philosophies, could have been brought together for a common high purpose. Despite some disappointments and disaffections, by and large the American Jewish Conference is recognized as having served a very useful and fruitful purpose, and to our late distinguished president, Henry Monsky, is due the appreciation of world Jewry for having brought about the creation and development of that organization.

On the eve of Rosh Hashonah, let us express the hope and prayer that the coming year may bring about a better understanding of our problems; and and closer co-operation and greater unity of action on the part of our people. Our activities, effective as they have been, will be even more so, through the development of mutual respect and the exercise of greater co-operation between Jewish organizations.

Let all of us strive for the unity in Israel which Bnai Brith has advocated for well over a century. Let all of us remember, whether we belong to Bnai Brith or not, as we go forward into the New Year, that we are all inheritors of the same great traditions of Israel. Jewish problems are many-faceted. Not only must we maintain with even greater intensity a defense program and minister to the needs of those who require our help, but we must perform the important task of preserving, and of re-building those positive values and spiritual qualities so essential to our normal growth and progress.

May the New Year bring the blessings of peace and freedom from oppression to the people of Israel. May the ideals of the democratic nations be protected against the onslaught of the forces of evil and injustice.



Sending another 70,000 horsepower generator at new DeCew Falls plant near St. Catharines.

HYDRO [illegible] NEW POWER PLANTS

Hydro is pushing construction to meet the pressing demand for more electricity. The above huge generator will soon pour an additional 70,000 horsepower into the Hydro system from the DeCew Falls plant near St. Catharines.

Two other larger plants in eastern Ontario, now under construction, will deliver 81,000 horsepower next year and 360,000 horsepower by 1951. These two major developments, with the DeCew Falls addition, will provide Ontario with a further badly needed half-million horsepower.

The growing output of Ontario's industries and farms benefits everyone but calls for more and more electricity. Even now that the war is over, the demand has not slackened but continues to mount. Hydro's peak load increased by more than 300,000 horsepower over the highest wartime demand, an increase of 25%. Generating plants take a long time to build and could not be started during the war.

Few places in the world have as much electricity available per person as Ontario. However, we must use our electricity sparingly so that all homes, all farm services and all industries will receive their share.

Will you do your part? . . . USE HYDRO WISELY and there will be enough for all.

Holiday Greetings

BEACH FOUNDRY LIMITED once again wishes to extend to their Jewish friends and customers Holiday Greetings on this occasion of the Jewish New Year.

Although production on many lines of our manufacture increased substantially during the past year, our efforts were not sufficient to cope with the ever-increasing demand for Beach products, which to-day enjoy a truly enviable reputation for Style, Quality, and unexcelled Value.

This year, with steel and other supplies becoming more available and with increased production efficiency, there should be more goods available for dealer distribution, than at any time heretofore, so please be patient — we are doing our utmost to serve you.

Creating New Comfort for THE HOMES OF CANADA

℞ Now—as for years past—B.P. research leads in the development of better, tougher constituents and improved manufacturing techniques to produce building materials with an endurance and weather resistance never before achieved.

Because of that leadership, there's greater protection and comfort—and added colourful beauty—for the homes of Canada. Roofs—walls—floors—all benefit from B.P. developments.

ROOFING

B.P. ASPHALT SHINGLES — in a choice of colours — give year-round, all-weather security against all roofing hazards.

B.P. ROLL ROOFING — for factories, sheds, camps — quickly and easily applied — gives dependable protection.

B.P. BUILT-UP ROOFING SERVICE — assures superior materials, complete specifications, expert inspection.

SIDING

B.P. INSUL-BRIC SIDING — protects, insulates, and gives a lasting colourful finish to wood-sided walls with ONE product at one labour cost.

B.P. MINE AND INDUSTRIAL SIDING — for all-weather protection and insulation — speeds construction, saves costs.

INSULATION

B.P. INSUL-BOARD — provides the utmost in moisture-proof, vapour-seal insulation, with its 5 plies of wood-fibre board integrated with special asphalt.

B.P. INSUL-BOARD LATH is the ideal plaster base.

FLOORING

B.P. ASPHALT TILE FLOORING — specially developed for application by an approved flooring contractor over either wood or concrete sub-floors — enduring, fire-safe, waterproof — available in a wide range of colours and designs. (B.P. were first in Canada to make an asphalt tile to suit Canadian conditions.

Insure Valuable Records Against Fire

Taylor Safes have survived unnumbered fires without loss. Many times they have been buried in fallen masonry and subjected to enormous weight as well as terrific heat. They have always come through with contents undamaged. Taylor Safes today include the improvements suggested by over three quarters of a century of experience.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS TO THE JEWISH COMMUNITY

NEW HORIZONS IN Canada Unlimited

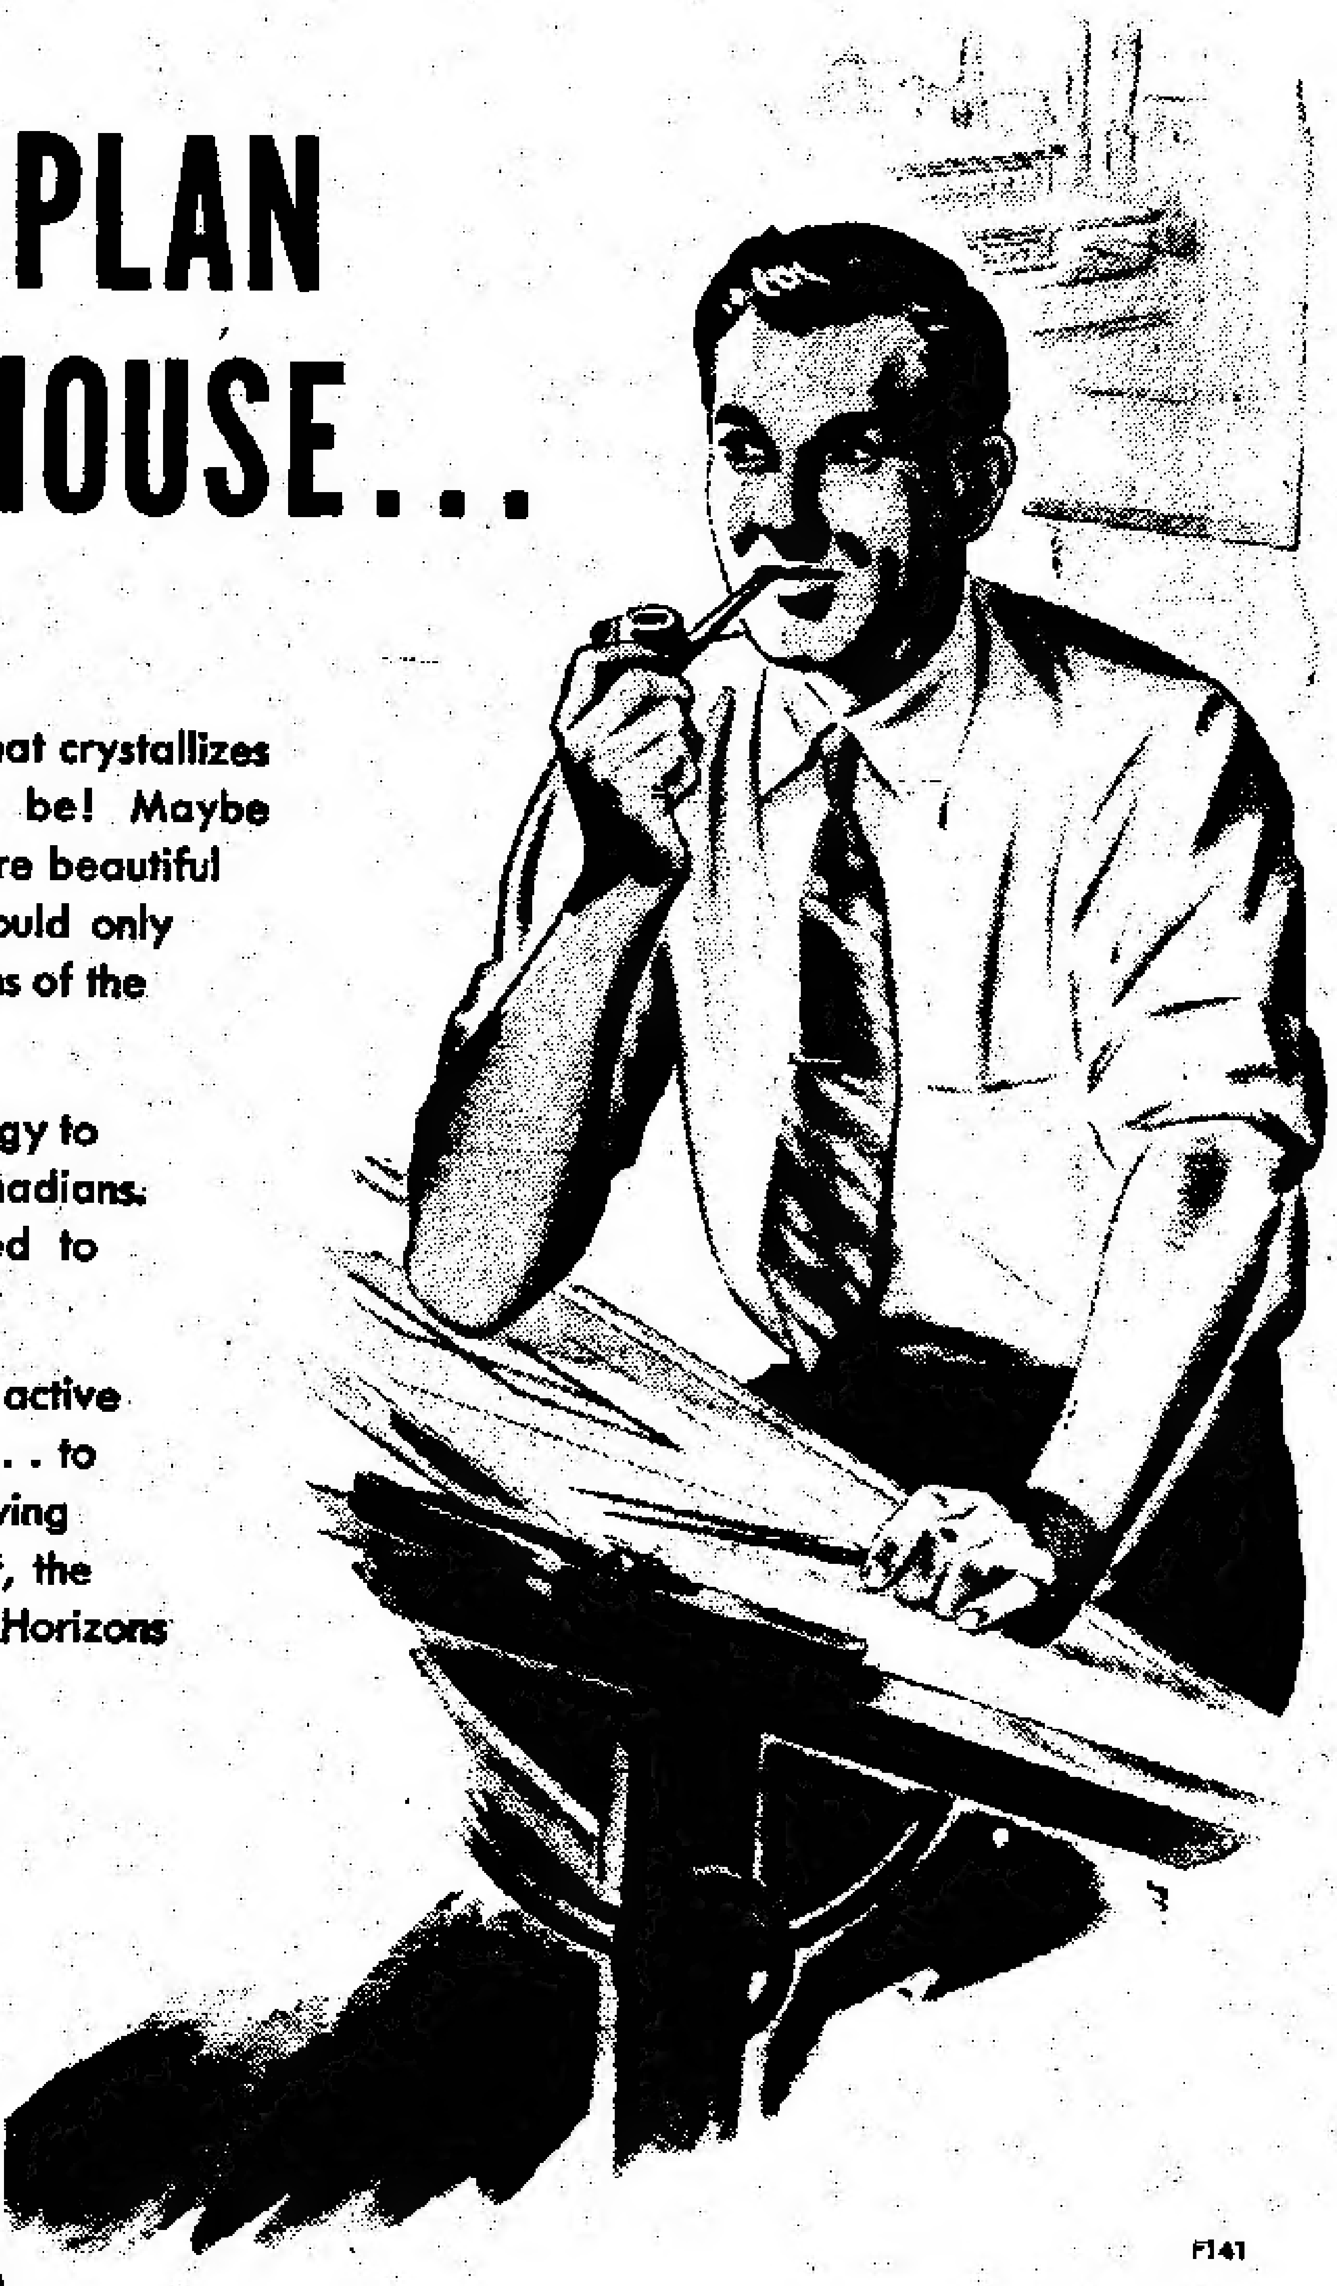
MAYBE HE'LL PLAN YOUR NEW HOUSE...



. . . the house of the future . . . the house that crystallizes all your notions of what a house should be! Maybe he'll rear a mightier power plant . . . a more beautiful skyscraper . . . a church such as Wren could only dream of . . . a community where Canadians of the New Age can taste life more fully.

The stuff of such things, the brains and energy to shape them, are the heritage of all Canadians. And Canada's Youth is on tiptoe, girded to meet the challenge of Tomorrow.

Youth needs only encouragement . . . active leadership in business and public affairs . . . to loose its energies, spur its ambitions, and swing wide the gates of opportunity. Given that, the path stretches bright and clear to New Horizons in Canada Unlimited.

BRINGING THE JEWISH COMMUNITIES OF AMERICA INTO PARTNERSHIP AGAINST ANTI-SEMITISM

By Donald Oberdorfer, Chairman, National Executive Committee And National Council Of The Joint Defense Appeal

An endeavour to bring the Jewish communities of America into active partnership in the fight against anti-Semitism keynoted the past year's work of the Joint Defense Appeal.

This course of action followed a mandate of the First National Conference held last January by the JDA, whose theme "Fighting Anti-Semitism On The American Front," attracted to the city of St. Louis a gathering of 450 communal leaders from all parts of the United States and Canada.

Realizing that fighting anti-Semitism must be accepted everywhere as a primary obligation of American Jewry, the conference set up machinery to enlist the active participation of Jewish communities. As a springboard to action, a National Executive Committee of 50 recognized communal leaders was formed, and a National Council, that today comprises more than 550 members, was established.

Since their establishment, both the National Executive Committee and the National Council have become responsible partners in formulating JDA campaign policies and in determining fair quotas for each community. They will also assume the role of helping to decide on the future national goals required to finance defense activities.

Formation of these two groups to voice increased communal participation has given character and personality to the country-wide effort. It has also provided a solid structure to make possible a national campaign for $6,000,000 which the conference called on the Joint Defense Appeal to conduct in order to finance the 1947 program of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith.

That campaign is now in progress. Welfare Funds show a desire for greater participation and their allocations during 1947 more nearly represent their rightful share in the fight to uproot bigotry from the American scene. Most encouraging of the signs indicating fuller community cooperation is the fact that communal leaders have become more cognizant of the needs of the two defense agencies, more familiar with their work and more aware of the necessity to support their program.

Rounding out forty-one years of service to Jewry, the American Jewish Committee continued during the past year to occupy a foremost position in the struggle to safeguard Jewish rights in the critical postwar world.

Its resources were mobilized to defend American ideals and institutions, to help the shattered Jewish communities of Europe in their reconstruction, to preserve Jewry as a religious and cultural force and to champion Jewish rights throughout the world.

An outstanding contribution to the safeguarding of democratic rights, upon which the domestic defense program rests, was made by the American Jewish Committee before the President's Committee on Civil Rights. Testifying before the President's Committee, Dr. John Slawson, AJC Executive Vice-President, presented a national program for civil liberties, urging intensive and far-reaching measures to safeguard c[illegible] rights and lessen group tensions and discrimination.

Investigation and exposure of native anti-Semitic and other hate-mongering groups constituted an important phase of the AJC's activities during the year. The Committee played a leading part in exposing the crypto-fascist Columbians in Atlanta, and other peddlers of hatred.

Through every channel of public information, as well as through specialized programs directed to industry, labor, veterans, women, youth, educators, clergymen and other segments of the population, the AJC attacked anti-Semitism. Stressing the danger of divisive group conflicts to our democracy, it cooperated continuously with non-sectarian groups and enlisted the services of outstanding public figures in its program. The AJC, through its Community Service Department, has provided literature, information, and other aids to Jewish community relations workers in over 300 cities. Among the cities receiving such services are 33, in which AJC chapters have been established.

Studies on the psychological basis of anti-Semitism, conducted by the Department of Scientific Research, gave promise of opening up new fields of action in the domestic defense area.

Jewish education and better understanding of themselves by Jews were also areas of heightened AJC activity. Studies of the attitudes of Jews toward themselves were undertaken by the Committee, and the Research Institute in Jewish Education, sponsored by the AJC, engaged in experimental work to strengthen the inner defenses of American Jews. Jewish education and self-adjustment were promoted by the publication of "Commentary", outstanding journal on Jewish interests.

The problem of religion in the public schools, anti-discrimination legislation, intensive measures to ensure equality of opportunity in education, and the elimination of objectionable matter in denominational schools and lesson materials; were among major Committee concerns during the year. The AJC also cooperated with the Advertis-

Hand in hand with the AJC defense of civil and religious rights of Jews, wherever threatened, went an intensive program of education to acquaint Americans with the plight of displaced persons and with the need to liberalize American immigration policy. The Committee also pressed for international action to facilitate Jewish immigration from Europe to other countries.

Its vital concern with the problem of resettlement and with the development of the Jewish homeland in Palestine was expressed in the Committee's statement to the United Nations Committee of Inquiry into Palestine. Through its President, Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, and the Chairman of the Executive Committee, Jacob Blaustein, the AJC urged a United Nations trusteeship for Palestine to guarantee the rights conferred by the Balfour Declaration, affirmed its traditional stand for maximum Jewish immigration and land settlement, attacked the British White Paper of 1939 as a "breach of trust", and opposed an immediate decision on Palestine's final political status. If, nevertheless, a final decision is rendered by the UN now, then partition is the "only solution", the Committee held.

Recognizing that in the interest of American Jewry's security, as well as for humanitarian reasons, Jewish life must be normalized abroad, the AJC expanded its overseas operations during the year to aid the reconstruction of Jewish communities in war-torn Europe. Help in planning educational, legal and public relations methods to combat anti-Semitism and to secure equal rights has been furnished, derived from AJC techniques and materials which have proved successful in curbing group friction in the United States.

During the year the AJC waged a successful campaign to include human rights guarantees in the peace treaties with former Axis satellite countries. In concert with other Jewish organizations, it is now pressing for similar measures in the German and Austrian treaties.

To coordinate Jewish activities in behalf of human rights and fundamental freedoms, the AJC, together with the Anglo-Jewish Association of Great Britain and the Alliance Israelite Universelle of France, formed the Consultative Council of Jewish Organizations. The CCJO was one of the two Jewish organizations admitted to consultative status to the UN Economic and Social Council.

The Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith brought new and tested approaches and a reorganized internal structure to the fight for better human relations during the year under review.

Governed by its national commission of community leaders and staffed by more than 250 specialists, ADL operated through its new framework of four major divisions — Administrative, Legal and Fact-Finding, Program, and Community Service.

The League's multi-departmental activities were thus coordinated to deal with religious and racial tensions which developed as an aftermath of the war. From this solid footing, the ADL's projects were planned to reach the widest possible audience.

In December, 1946, Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, of New York, was elected to the national chairmanship of the League. He succeeded the late Sigmund Livingston who died in June of that year after more than 33 years as head of the organization.

Major Fact-Finding activities during the year were centered on the KKK, the Columbians, numerous small-fry groups and the mushrooming of many large "nationalistic" associations led and backed by men with dubious records. In the instances of the Klan and the Columbians, a vast amount of evidence gathered by ADL men aided in their exposure.

ADL also exposed Norman Jaques, member of Canada's Parliament, who cooperated in the States with Gerald L. K. Smith; it uncovered the anti-Semitic activities of Hunt Diederich, the American sculptor who was removed from the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and pressed charges against J. B. Stoner, Jr., leader of Tennessee's Anti-Jewish Party in the federal courts. In addition, the Legal Division investigated several hundred localized anti-Semitic incidents including assaults on Jewish individuals, desecration of cemeteries and synagogues and outbreaks of vandalism against Jewish-owned property. The Division also continued its scrutiny of the subversive press and issued its annual review of the anti-Semitic situation in the U.S.

The Program Division in the meantime continued to carry its message to the public through modern advertising and communication techniques giving equal attention to the spoken and written word — aiming that message at not only the general public but at specific areas within the population reached by labor organizations, foreign language groups, veterans, schools and colleges, and religious organizations. Of unusual interest were some of its special projects such as the ADL sponsored speaking tour of Bess Myerson, Miss America of 1945, and the distribution of Irving Caesar's "Sing A Song of Friendship" in book and record form. In the radio field, too, the ADL made a major contribution through the Institute for Democratic Education, subventioning its tenth series of Lest We Forget which was broadcast over more than 700 radio stations, in scores of schools and colleges and by the Armed Forces Radio Service. This series of broadcasts won a 1946 Showmanagement Award from Variety and a First Award at Ohio State University's Institute for Education by Radio.

The spoken word from the lecture platforms also was used as an educational force for better human relations. More than 7,000 speaking engagements were filled by 300 lecturers of the A D L Speakers' Bureau, addressing all kinds of clubs and organizations. One speaker alone reached 35,000 students in four middle western states.

Aware that 10,000,000 returned veterans were particular targets of anti-Semites, ADL worked closely with leaders of the American Legion, AMVETS, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Veterans Committee and other groups, providing local posts throughout the nation with materials and guidance to develop democratic educational programs.

The Veterans Department also conferred with War Department officials on a program designed to counteract Nazi indoctrination of American troops serving overseas.

In the year under review, ADL won its long fight against the Horner Report of the American Dental Association which sanctioned the maintenance of racial and religious quotas in dental colleges to correct "racial and geographical imbalances" among students. By reawakening public opinion to this flagrant violation of the American creed, the League succeeded in forcing the issue last fall when the ADA "unequivocally" repudiated the report in a letter to every dental school dean in the nation.

The Department of Education linked forces with several progressive education agencies to break down prejudice in the one place where it should never take root—the classroom. The Literature Department published more than 1,000,000 reprints of newspaper stories, radio broadcasts and magazine articles that exposed religious and racial prejudice and distributed them through church, youth, veteran and adult educational groups.

The League also cooperated, through financial and staff aid, with the Institute for American Democracy campaign to blanket the nation with poster, bill-board cartoon and blotter advertising—expertly planned to give the American public a greater appreciation of the American creed.

ADL representatives visited every important AFL and CIO convention held during the year and won important support from labor for group relations programs. In a far-reaching agreement between the Jewish Labor Committee, the League laid plans to coordinate its campaign in the ranks of labor with the JLC in a program that will utilize personnel and facilities of both groups in more than 30 cities of the United States and Canada.

The Foreign Language Department sent lecturers, films and literature to large audiences of foreign-born Americans. If the vicious lies of hate-mongers like Gerald Smith and Homer Loomis, Jr., went into one ear, the facts about Jews and the dangers of religious prejudice entered the other.

The League's Economic and Social Discrimination Department provided state anti-discrimination agencies of New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey with facts about numerous anti-Jewish violations and counselled many individuals who asked the ADL to represent them in their application for redress from state officials. The Department carried its efforts beyond mere punitive measures in individual cases to carry on a corrective educational program. The effectiveness of this approach was illustrated in one instance where a complaint lodged with a large industrial corporation resulted not only in the elimination of discrimination in employment by this company, but in the organization of a plant-wide educational project in group relations to create an atmosphere of harmony among all its workers.

The ADL Religious Department continued to enlist the friendship and cooperation of more than 8,500 ministers working as members of the Christian Friends of the ADL.

During the war, 1,500 key-men experienced in human relations work, visited hundreds of communities and set up interfaith community enterprises where men and women of all creeds rolled up their sleeves, worked together and gained new respect for one another.

In a strongly-worded, fact-filled brief filed before the President's Committee on Civil Rights in Washington, the League produced important evidence to show that current conditions made indispensable federal legislation to defend civil rights of minority groups in America. The League urged the Congress to adopt laws on: the protection of civil rights; bias in employment; discrimination in schools and colleges; restrictive covenants in real estate deeds; publications defamatory of racial and religious groups; poll taxes and lynchings.

Indicated here are but a few of the many activities carried on by the ADL. They are but a brief indication of the many-faceted program carried on by the various departments which together give a continued impact to the fight on anti-Semitism.

can boast that we have converted the desert and the wilderness into a garden.

We have built in Palestine modern cities, schools, hospitals, a great university. Indeed, Jewish Palestine, with its 650,000 Jews, is the most modern community in the entire Near East. And the Jews of Palestine are eager to share with their refugee brethren of Europe the last crumb of bread and to bring them to rest and security in Eretz Israel.

But England marshalls her gallant naval vessels to halt the ships of Haganah from bringing Jews into Palestine. Shocking was the brutality administered by British warships to "The Exodus Ship 1947". Cruel and conscience-less are the methods employed by the erstwhile friend of Israel in dealing with Israel.

We are not at war with the British people. We have stood in admiration of them when they stood alone and fought the Nazis. But we should be guilty in a lack of self-respect if we were to be silent in the face of the cruelty perpetrated by those in command, military and governmental, of present British affairs.

The Jewish achievements in Palestine are now in danger. The British, of course, are eager to hold control of the Near East. The United States and English oil interests and the fear for Russia's growing power, all these factors can explain something of the present Near East tragedy. But thus are we Jews rewarded for honest toil and sacrifice in a world of power politics and injustice and we are justified in being embittered.

We Jews do pray in the words of the ancient Berocho that the coming year be sweet and that bitterness will fade away. That bitterness will fade if everywhere justice be made the goal of life. May the conscience of the nations in power be awakened so that justice may be meted out to the little people of Israel who first gave to a spiritually blinded world visions of righteousness. What misfortunes we can not overcome, let us hope that at least we may be blessed during the coming year with courage to bear them with a calmness and dignity characteristic of our Jewish tradition.

Freedom from injustice for us and our fellow man will indeed restore to us the sweet savor of life. This is our hope for 5708 as we dip the apple in the honey and we repeat as did the sires of yore, the ancient Rosh Hashonah prayer: "Yehi Retzon Millenecho Adonoi Elohenu V'Lohe Avosenu Shetchadesh Olenu Shomo Tovu Umsuko."

are well-known and many. Common sense and world events have, in the past decade and a half, resulted in centralized fund raising of virtually every Jewish community in North America. The campaign in Montreal, in addition to the Federation, includes the Jewish General Hospital, the Canadian Jewish Congress, the United Jewish Relief Agencies, Hillel Foundation, and the United Jewish Camps. Through the United Jewish Relief Agencies, which provide funds for the Joint Distribution Committee, our campaign reaches beyond the community into the displaced persons camps in Europe, and into other parts of the world where Jews are living in [illegible] distress and emergency.

For these people each successive new year has been a year of tragedy and anguish. Their spirits are kept alive by the hope of eventual solution of their problems, and by the knowledge that we shall not forsake them. The Combined Jewish Appeal Campaign this year is being conducted from October 27 through November 11, and is an opportunity for us to [illegible] something of our faith and at the same time to justify the faith which others have in us.

For all of us these are days of momentous weight and grave [illegible] [illegible] the year — [illegible] of the importance of learning. I do not refer to secular education but to theological. An oligarchy, zealous and austere, dominated the intellectual circles of Providence Street, and its shibboleth was a knowledge of the Sacred Books. With a kind of jocular awe, it would be said of a man of learning, "He knows his Black Dots!" This subtle and heady praise was reserved for the massive scholars, the truly erudite. The Black Dots were periods placed singly or in slanting rows under the letters in the sacred chants — the "Song of Songs," for example — and were musical notations for their cantillation. A man's standing in the intellectual life of the community was determined, symbolically, by his familiarity with the Black Dots. My father belonged to a group whose avocation it was to read through the six basic Talmudic books of the Mishna once a year. Avocation is hardly the word, since, for the members of this group, it was their outside, wordly lives that were marginal, not their religious absorptions. They spoke in hushed reverence of the great scholars of Russia—the saints, or Gaonim, as they were called—who read the entire sixty volumes of the Talmud once a year. In this task, the saints were assisted by the circumstance that they knew most of the Talmudic books by heart anyway. But on Providence Street, the scholars contented themselves with reading through the six volumes of the Mishna, and I remember the celebrations, with wine and cake, that took place annually when the elderly students had completed their Talmudic marathons.

Just as the phrase "He knows his Black Dots" was the accolade of grace, so another phrase connoted the ultimate in vituperation. This was to say of a man, "He is a Grober Jung (Gross Fellow)!" It is impossible to convey, in a literal translation from the Yiddish, the virulent contempt of this expression. You might have written the English prose of a Walter Pater, but on Providence Street if you were unfamiliar with theological law, the endless convolutions of Talmudic exegesis, you were a Gross Fellow and there was nothing to be done about it: spiritually and intellectually you were in limbo. You might have got rich by manufacturing combs, you might have a Winton Six, a [illegible] wife, a stained-glass window, and connections in Boston, but to the Sanhedrin, who were the uncrowned dictators of the intense spiritual and mental life of the hill, if you weren't on speaking terms with the Black Dots, you were out of the running. The epithet Grober Jung conveyed a density not merely intellectual but spiritual, a coarseness of sensibility as well as [illegible] [illegible] of mind. It sometimes [illegible] me when it was applied by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] but the [illegible] always [illegible].

Now Mr. Wolfson knew nothing at all about the Black Dots. He was, by common consent, a Grober Jung. I have thought since that [illegible] I had [illegible] the phrase "[illegible]" [illegible] I might have used it [illegible] Mr. Wolfson and I [illegible] that it was the menace of the, to him, unknown Black Dots that did him in. Mr. Wolfson, it is clear to me now, must have had an intense awareness of his intellectual shortcomings. Perhaps he thought to compensate for them by acquiring the glittering bauble of the presidency of the Providence Street Synagogue, which had become vacant. In any case, Mr. Wolfson threw his hat into the ring. (Did he argue, I wonder, that at least he had the wardrobe for it?) His first move was to endow a Hebrew school for the young. There was no rabbinical Hatch Act to limit campaign expenditures, and Mr. Wolfson spent lavishly. The street buzzed with controversy and indignation. An ignoramus who had not even a bowing acquaintance with the Black Dots to be president! A manifest Gross Fellow for president! An illiterate comb manufacturer to sit beside the Ark, dominating the congregation and on an equal eminence with the learned and revered Rabbi Silver himself! It was unthinkable, it was blasphemous, it was obscene. Nevertheless, Mr. Wolfson won.

The first Friday night that Mr. Wolfson, in full regalia, walked down the aisle to the presidential chair, the atmosphere of the Providence Street Synagogue was quivering with tension. The cognoscenti focussed on the majestically advancing figure looks of hostility and contempt. One could hear a faint sigh of disapprobation. I remember a fascinating item of Mr. Wolfson's inaugural costume; with the stovepipe hat and the Prince Albert and the striped trousers I was familiar, but for this occasion the incoming president had provided himself with an extraordinary tie, the like of which I had never seen. It was not a tie, properly speaking, at all. It was a little, puffed-out bed of shiny gray silk or satin, which entirely covered the triangle formed by the silk-faced lapels of Mr. Wolfson's coat. From the center of this coverlet, there gleamed a diamond pin. The new president mounted the carpeted steps to the little platform slowly, and before he sat down, he looked for a moment with defiance at the congregation, his dull, shifty eyes seeking out his enemies. His look plainly said, "You may be the masters of the Black Dots, of which I know nothing, but I am master of you!" His glance swept for a moment to the gallery, where the ladies were segregated, and met his wife's. It seemed to me that they exchanged a look of mutual triumph. Then Mr. Wolfson gave a screw to his mustaches and sat down. I looked up at Mrs. Wolfson and was dazzled. She had seldom gone to the synagogue on Friday nights (her absence from these services had constituted the basis of one of the charges of impiety against the Wolfsons, but she was there that night to witness her husband's victory. I had never before seen Mrs. Wolfson in the evening, and I remember getting a clear impression that on this occasion she looked like an opera singer. She was ample, and I must have compared her, unconsciously, with colored posters of Tetrazzini at which I had stopped to stare in a record-shop window on Main Street.

The pride of office went to Mr. Wolfson's head and he eventually overplayed his hand. He must have been president for about six months and in the full tide of his power when an incident occurred that shook the street. One Saturday, during an interlude in the service, Mr. Wolfson did an unforgivable thing. He looked across the dais at Rabbi Silver and beckoned to him to come over the president's throne. I was standing beside my father, not far away, and saw the whole thing, as I was afterward called upon frequently to recount. Rabbi Silver, in response to the president's gesture, smiled but did not move. He shook his head slightly. He meant to convey to Mr. Wolfson that it was not becoming for a parishioner to summon a rabbi, no matter how exalted the parishioner was. Mr. Wolfson motioned again, and Rabbi Silver smiled and shook his head again. For a moment, the little strip of carpet between Mr. Wolfson and Rabbi Silver became a charged field — a Canossa.

The incident might have passed without too many repercussions, because Rabbi Silver was a wise and tolerant man, had it not been for the dramatic intrusion of Mr. Rubinstein, the Providence Street drunk. Mr. Rubinstein was a little, watery-eyed, grizzled old man, who fascinated me because he was nearly always talking to himself; whenever you met him, he was likely to be engaged in a deep and engrossing conversation with himself, and he did not mind in the least if you eavesdropped. Sometimes Mr. Rubinstein had to be refused admittance to the synagogue, but on the day of the little drama of Mr. Wolfson and Rabbi Silver, Mr. Rubinstein was present, and in a state of comparative lucidity. Since he did not happen to be interviewing himself that day, he was able to register what seemed to him an unforgivable lapse of form on Mr. Wolfson's part. He lurched up to the foot of the steps leading to the presidential chair and shouted up to Mr. Wolfson, shaking a fist at him, "How dare you! You ignoramus, how dare you motion to the Rabbi to come to a Gross Fellow like you! If you want him, there he is. Go to him, and thank your God he speaks to you!" Mr. Rubinstein uttered the dread "Grober Jung" so loudly that the whole congregation heard it. Mr. Wolfson's habitual pallor deepened. The spasmodic working of his cheek muscles revealed that the barbed epithet had reached its mark. He wilted. True, the insult had come from the scum of the earth, but Mr. Wolfson was only too aware that it represented the communal opinion of him. I got a quick, undefined impression that it represented Mr. Wolfson's secret appraisal of himself. The dread thing had been blurted out loud; it could not be recalled. For a few days, the despised Mr. Rubinstein became a hero, the spokesman of the spirit against the fleshpots.

From then on, things went from bad to worse for Mr. Wolfson. To be sure, he finished out his term of office. He continued to wear his Prince Albert and his stovepipe hat, he still twirled his mustache, but his eminence had become the eminence of the pillory. The virtuosi of the Black Dots jeered at him openly. He did not seek reëlection, he no longer appeared in the synagogue, and he disappeared from my view and from the view of Providence Street generally. One day Providence Street munched with relish the rumor that Mr. Wolfson was "in trouble." His comb business had failed. His factory, it was said, had been taken over by the bank. These reports meant little to me. I still used to pass Mr. Wolfson's house and gape at his stained-glass window. No one who inhabited such grandeur, I was certain, could really be said to be in serious trouble. It was not until I learned that the bank had taken over Mr. Wolfson's house and had dispossessed him that I got a true inkling of the tragedy. For a long time after that, I kept passing the house. It looked mournful. The windows, except for the stained-glass one, were boarded up. Either the custodians from the bank were aesthetes or the size and shape of the oval window presented a mechanical problem they were too lazy to solve.

I was to see Mr. Wolfson just once more. It was a late afternoon in October of the next year. Coming back from a tramp in the woods beyond the Academy, I picked up Mr. Rubinstein. He was swaying along, deeply absorbed in one of his rapt conversations. He made no acknowledgment that I had joined him, but he must have been aware of it, because when he presently considered a good point, he nudged me and gave me a sly, self-appreciative glance out of the corners of his rheumy eyes. As we came to the Wolfson mansion, I stopped. The setting sun had caught the stained-glass window and it blazed in a bewildering medley of color. Mr. Rubinstein, involved in his own dialectic, did not look at the window; he had stopped because I had, and he stood at the curb, his back to the house, summing up his case. As I turned regretfully away from the glory of Mr. Wolfson's window, I became aware of a nondescript figure toiling up the hill, on the opposite sidewalk. Suddenly, Mr. Rubinstein saw him, too; he forgot, for a moment, his personal argument and took time out to spout his automatic epithet at Mr. Wolfson. His voice rose in a kind of scream. "There he goes, the Gross Fellow!" he shouted.

It really was Mr. Wolfson. I should not have known him. He was tieless and collarless; his worn suit hung limply on his shrunken figure. His ginger mustache drooped wispily. He saw us and, suddenly energized, started swiftly across the street toward us. As he came closer, I saw that his eyes, fastened on Mr. Rubinstein, were maniacal; he was riven with hatred. He howled something at Mr. Rubinstein, who had already forgotten him and had resumed his earlier argument or, for all I knew, started another, entirely different. From the way Mr. Wolfson looked at him, I saw that Mr. Rubinstein symbolized for him the whole course of his downfall. I was sure that Mr. Wolfson was going to kill Mr. Rubinstein. Indeed, halfway across the road, Mr. Wolfson bent down and picked up a rock to hurl at Mr. Rubinstein. I remember being horribly certain that if Mr. Wolfson missed Mr. Rubinstein, the rock would smash the stained-glass window, and, curiously, my concern was divided equally between the beloved window and Mr. Rubinstein. Mr. Wolfson advanced, rock in hand, murderous. At this moment, something pathetic must have cropped up in Mr. Rubinstein's talk with his imaginary interlocutor. He was completely unaware of Mr. Wolfson's approach; he had forgotten him entirely, and the new and unguessable situation he had become involved in was so poignant that he sat down suddenly on the curb and began to cry. Mr. Wolfson advanced. I wanted to explain to Mr. Wolfson that Mr. Rubinstein was lost in a labyrinth of his own. I wanted to stop him somehow, but I was paralyzed with irresolution. So, now, was Mr. Wolfson. It is probable that the sad story it suddenly occurred to Mr. Rubinstein to tell himself saved his life, for Mr. Wolfson must have misinterpreted Mr. Rubinstein's tears as a plea for mercy. The rock dropped from Mr. Wolfson's hand. He came up to Mr. Rubinstein and pushed him with his foot. Mr. Rubinstein rolled over comfortably on his side still weeping contentedly. For a moment, Mr. Wolfson looked down at him with dead eyes. Then he resumed his climb up the hill.

A month or so later, when I passed the Wolfson house again, it was covered with scaffolding and workmen were going in and out the front door. The bank was risks life to prevent disaster

It was Sunday afternoon. Armand Turmel and his wife were sitting on a balcony facing [illegible] street in Sherbrooke, Quebec. Suddenly, Armand grasped his wife's arm. "Look! Who's the kid driving that car?" Picking up speed down the steep grade, an automobile was swerving from side to side.

NO DRIVER

Then, as the car approached the Turmels, they saw that there was no one at the wheel. [illegible] with a warning shout, Armand dashed from the balcony and sprinted out to the runaway automobile. When he finally reached it the car had gathered considerable speed. Ahead there were children playing in a street, and persons oblivious to the danger were walking down the hill. Beyond, there was a dangerous drop [illegible].

DIVES FOR BRAKES

Armand wrenched open the door and threw himself across the front seat. In the nick of time he applied the brakes and brought the car to a stop.

This man's quick and courageous action undoubtedly averted what might have been a terrible accident. We are proud to recognize the bravery of Armand Turmel of Sherbrooke, Quebec, through the presentation of The Dow Award.

As the car sped out of control down the street, Armand Turmel realized he would have to act fast to avert disaster.

Zionist General Council Endorses Palestine Report

Following is the resolution adopted at Zurich, Switzerland, by the Zionist General Council:

The Zionist General Council (Actions Committee) has given preliminary consideration to the report and the recommendations of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine. It considers the study carried out by the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine and its report an earnest effort to arrive at a practicable solution of the Palestine problem.

The Council notes with satisfaction that a substantial majority of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine recommended the early establishment of a sovereign Jewish state. The territory proposed is a minor part of the territory originally promised to the Jewish people on the basis of its historic rights and does not include areas of the utmost importance. There are other features of the proposals which require careful examination. The Executive will, after further study of the proposals, present the views of the Jewish Agency at the forthcoming General Assembly of the United Nations. The definitive attitude of the Jewish people will be determined after the General Assembly has taken a decision on the Palestine question.

The Council regrets to have to state that the proposal of the minority of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine is wholly unacceptable and cannot serve as a basis for discussion. The suggested federal state would actually convert Palestine into an Arab state in which Jews would be condemned to remain a permanent minority. Their right of immigration, being subject to the decision of an Arab majority, would be effectively denied. They would not be free to settle in most parts of the federal state, of which they presumably would be citizens. The discriminatory land policy of the White Paper would thereby be perpetuated. According to the proposed constitution the will of the Arab majority would, in major issues, be decisive. In the context of these proposals the use of the term "Jewish state" is misleading. The constructive and progressive forces of the Jewish people would, in the suggested federal state, be fettered and stifled, and the economic and social development of the country would thereby be impeded.

The Council proclaims that Palestine alone can solve the problem of the national homelessness of the Jewish people. No settlement of the Palestine problem can be accepted by the Jewish people which fails to ensure the right of Jews to return to their homeland, and the establishment of a sovereign Jewish state. The Executive is instructed to continue its efforts towards a speedy and satisfactory settlement along these lines.

Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, chairman of the Executive of the Jewish Agency's American section and the Zionist Emergency Council, called upon the United States to assume the leadership in implementing the majority report of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine.

The Zionist Actions Committee accepted the majority report as a basis for negotiations. The committee said the majority report is "an earnest effort to bring the problem to a just conclusion."

The committee said, however, it believes that Jerusalem should be part of the Jewish state and that northern Galilee should not be partitioned. The majority report of the U.N. committee recommended that Jerusalem be set apart under a special international rule, while western Galilee should be part of the Arab state and eastern Galilee part of the Jewish state.

Dr. Silver said: "The United States is the key of the tortured problem of Palestine. If the American government will assume the leadership in carrying through a solution in the spirit of the majority report, such a solution is bound to be accepted by the U.N."

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, declared that the report of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine "furnished a basis on which a solution may be achieved," but added that materialization of the recommendations would require that "an attitude of reasonableness and sincerity must be re-established among all concerned."

Dr. Wise said that "Great Britain alone, by halting the deportation of the Exodus refugees, by releasing the Cyprus internees for admission to Palestine, and by assuring the Jews and the world that it will abide by the U.N. recommendations, can re-establish that atmosphere." The commission, he said, "has done the job it was commissioned to do. Britain and the U.N. must now do their job."

The A. J. C. head declared the majority report had established a basis for solution "by recognizing the claim to Jewish statehood, by recommending the end of the British mandate and the annulment of the 1939 land laws, and by providing for a substantial number of Jewish immigrants during the interim period."

CHIEF OF U.S.A. CHAPLAINS GREETS JEWS

A message was sent from Major General Luther D. Miller, chief of chaplains, U.S.A., to the Jewish chaplains, in which he said:

"Fellow chaplains: Please join my best wishes with your greetings to the men of the Jewish faith in the United States Army and Air Forces on the celebration of Rosh Hashonah.

"May the members of your congregations experience a gratifying observance of their high holy days. May their worship sustain their personal power, their inner confidence and spiritual vision. May God bless them in their individual endeavors with a happy New Year.

"God, the Father of all mankind, has guided the perspective and advancement of American life through the inspiration of our religious faiths. May He bless all of us through the benevolences of our character and deeds which our religious faiths engender."

Ceremony Marks First Recognition Of A Synagogue As U.S. Historic Site

The Touro Synagogue, in Newport, Rhode Island, oldest Jewish house of worship in the U.S., was dedicated as a national historic site.

A small, two-story brick building, painted buff with brown trim, the 184-year-old synagogue was proud host as more than 800 persons, representing all faiths, attended a ceremony which marked the first recognition of a Jewish synagogue by the National Park Service. Only three other churches with active congregations have been designated as national historic sites. Two are protestant; the third is Roman Catholic.

The dedication program lasted more than two hours. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the House of Representatives, delivered the principal address. Other speakers included Governor John O. Pastore, of Rhode Island; United States Senator Theodore Francis Greene, of Rhode Island; Mayor Edward G. Gladding, of Newport, and Rabbi David de Sola Pool, of Congregation Shearith Israel, in New York. Carl Van Doren, historian, presided.

All the speeches stressed the aspect of religious freedom symbolized by the ancient synagogue.

"The faith of a man is the way he chooses to worship God," said Mr. Martin. "Neither religion, race nor national origin can give you the measure of a man's worth — the true measure of every human being is in his character.

"That is why Americans believe in human rights, equality of opportunity for all. That is why Americans treasure democracy and freedom above life itself. In these principles, I believe, lies the meaning of our dedication today of the Touro Synagogue as a national shrine."

A message from President Truman was read by Dr. Pool. In his congratulations to Congregation Jeshuat Israel, whose members laid the cornerstone of the synagogue a century after the congregation was organized in 1658, the President said:

"The setting apart of this historic shrine as a national monument is symbolic of our tradition of freedom, which has inspired men and women of every creed, race and ancestry to contribute their highest gifts to the development of our national culture."

Because of radio commitments, first over Mutual network and later over two local stations, the program was presented in digest form and then repeated at full length. Scarcely 200 persons were able to crowd inside the immaculately kept synagogue, and most of the audience sat outside and heard the addresses over loudspeakers.

A bronze tablet affixed to the outer wall of the synagogue was unveiled by Dr. Francis S. Ronalds, who represented the National Park Service of the Department of Interior. Dr. Ronalds said later that there are 100 national historic sites, but this was only the fourth active religious edifice to be so designated.

The other three are St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, in East Chester, N.Y.; Gloria Dei Church in Philadelphia (originally Lutheran but now Protestant Episcopal); and San Jose Roman Catholic Church, in San Antonio, Texas.

Mr. Van Doren described the Touro Synagogue as "the continuing monument of as brave a band of pioneers as ever came to America. Congregation Jeshuat Israel was founded by Jewish refugees from Spain."

Evidence of their welcome in Rhode Island and their participation in the affairs of the community is founded in the synagogue itself Mr. Van Doren pointed out that it was designed by Peter Harrison, "who was not of their faith but was the most distinguished of Colonial architects."

The white and austere interior of the synagogue looks like a typical New England church, according to the New York Herald Tribune. White pillars, six on a side represent the tribes of Israel. [illegible] they are cut from the trunks of New England trees and the capitals are Ionic. From the balcony above Corinthian pillars [illegible] support the roof. Mr. Van Doren compared the pale blue ceiling to "the eternal heavens which look down on men of all faiths."

The foundations of the synagogue were laid in 1759. It was first dedicated in 1763 by Dr. Isaac de Abraham Touro. George Washington visited the synagogue in 1790 and wrote to the congregation that "happily the government of the United States . . . gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance." This message is inscribed on the bronze tablet.

Governor Pastore said his presence at the ceremony was "quite as much by mandate as by invitation," because of acceptance by the Rhode Island General Assembly in [illegible] of legacy and trust of the Abraham Touro Fund. The fund was provided by Judah Touro, son of the first rabbi at the synagogue.

SOUTH AMERICAN JEWRY: OLD AND NEW

By Ilya Trotzky

Nazism, Fascism, and the Second World War have wrought far-reaching changes in the composition of South American Jewry together with its economic structure. We have no thorough study of the subject, nor even any precise statistics concerning the numbers and occupations of Jews in the various countries of South America. Whatever knowledge we do have is more or less of a conjectural character, certainly not based on complete data. However, the total Jewish population of the South American continent is estimated at 750,000. And we know that the oldest community, that of Argentina, is scarcely fifty years old.

With Hitler's accession to power in 1933, large masses of Jews began to wend their way to the Latin American continent. Immigration then became an acute problem for both the Central and South American republics, and with the outbreak of hostilities in 1939, the problem grew still more acute, finally resulting in a radical change of the immigration policies of these countries. The once wide-open door began gradually to shut, and in some countries access to new immigrants was altogether barred. Growing weaker and weaker, the main stream of immigration has now almost entirely dried up.

From this general anti-immigration policy, it goes without saying that the Jews have suffered most. True, the Latin American governments have emphatically denied any particular discrimination against Jews. Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, and Brazil, claiming to be democratic, put forth the principle of equality of races, nations and religions as a veil for anti-Jewish immigration practices. On the other hand, Bolivia and Paraguay openly admit that they consider persons of Jewish origin to be undesirable immigrants, excepting those who are converts to Christianity. Likewise, Brazil grants a certain preference to immigrants holding baptismal certificates.

It is true, as we have already mentioned, that the war put a virtual stop to the flow of immigrants, and only a few fortunate Jews succeeded in breaking through the immigration cordons. How many refugees actually did manage to settle in the South American countries in the last thirteen years, it is difficult to estimate even now. No exact statistics are available, since most of the European Jews are not registered as Jews, but according to their citizenship — that is to say, as Germans, Austrians, Czechoslovaks, Dutch, French or Italians. Even in cases where passports are stamped "Jew", it appears that the bearers seek to conceal their Jewishness.

The majority of the refugees are naturally German-speaking Jews. Of these, Argentina has nearly forty thousand, Brazil fifteen thousand, Chile eight thousand, Bolivia six thousand, Peru five thousand, and Uruguay six thousand. Jews who speak French, Italian, or Dutch are a minority; they are numbered only in the hundreds, and their intellectual and economic influence is insignificant.

In general, it may be said that the social, economic and demographic structure of the Latin American republics presents an interesting and unexplored field for sociologists. As for the present social structure of the Jewish settlements in these countries, it is almost everywhere the same. The Jews perform the middleman functions, and thus constitute one of the most important factors in the relations between city and country. Everywhere, trade overshadows all other occupations and professions. Jewish economic life is based mainly on the peddler, the small industrialist, and the artisan.

In this respect, only Argentina and Brazil are exceptions. It was Jewish colonization which in Argentina laid the foundations of the present flourishing settlement; and the Jewish colonist, although he still must struggle hard for his existence, is the pride of South American Jewry. While in Brazil Jewish colonization has never had a solid economic basis, and has not yet gone beyond an experimental stage, it has in recent years begun to show accelerated progress.

Throughout, it was the Jewish peddler who paved the way for the large-scale trader. The South American peddler is the younger, modern brother of the North American peddler, but his methods are not quite the same. His is a much more serious and social approach to his role, embodying a more progressive attitude. In the course of the decades of his activities in Argentina and the twenty to twenty-five years of his activities in the other Latin American countries, he succeeded in evolving from a primitive itinerant peddler into a first rank trader or exporter.

The achievement of the Jewish colonist in agriculture and the Jewish peddler in trade is matched by the likewise brilliant achievement of the Jewish artisan in the realm of industry. In Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and Chile, thanks to Jewish initiative, there grew up a whole network of industrial enterprises. Some of these are still exclusively in Jewish hands, as, for instance, lumber, leather, and tiles. Moreover, in Uruguay it was the Jews who founded the tourist industry; it was they who a quarter of a century ago opened the eyes of the Uruguayans to the natural beauty of their sea beaches, and their value for the national economy. That Uruguay has become the center of South American tourism is due exclusively to the Jews.

It might be interesting at this point to review in greater detail the evolution of South American Jewry. Eastern European Jewish tradesmen and artisans settled in Buenos Aires as early as the 1890's. The majority of them had come to Argentina practically without means, and many with no capital but their hands. The unaccustomed climatic conditions, the semi-exotic environment, the strange tongue, and particularly, the absence of an organized Jewish community, had a depressing effect on the new immigrants. Moreover, from the very first days they had to face a moral problem which involved the general honor of Jewry.

Their sense of human dignity compelled them to isolate themselves from that class of individuals which Argentinian and Brazilian Jews refer to as tamaim. This human scum, recruited from elements deriving from the social periphery of the Jewish communities of Warsaw, Lodz, and Galicia, had acquired a bad name on the South American continent because of their participation in the white slave traffic. As a result, the new immigrants were forced to fight simultaneously for their material existence and their civic reputation. So strong was the vitality of the Eastern European Jewish immigrants that they successfully passed the test, attaining an important position in the culture and economy of their new homeland.

In the effort to make a living, the Jewish immigrants were led to take a path that was in a sense predetermined. Realizing the low economic potentiality of the average consumers, mostly Argentinian peasants, the Jews perceived that they could win them as customers only by offering them easy conditions of payment. Herein, the peddler proved to be a good businessman and psychologist. Trudging along the swampy roads or traveling in primitive vehicles to the distant corners of the endless pampas, visiting the most forlorn little towns and villages, the peddler expanded his market and increased his turnover; and more than that, unwittingly he became a pioneer in the task of bringing closer city and countryside, and a carrier of civilization. He, the peddler, the ambulant merchant, taught the South American peasant, the gaucho and proletarian, to clothe, to feed, and to house himself like a human being. The Jewish peddler aroused the appetite of the natives for a better, a more comfortable existance.

Only a few decades ago, the economic level of Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and other Latin American republics was still very low. These countries were predominantly agrarian, and in need of goods of all kind. They were also lacking in artisans. The slightest initiative in this respect evoked great response; and the boldest prospects offered themselves for commercial middlemen. Big industry was altogether non-existent, small scale industry and handicraft were still in their beginnings. Trade remained on a primitive level.

Then came the German Jews, giving trade and industry a powerful impetus. What the poor and backward Eastern European immigrants had planted by dint of hard work and untiring efforts, the new German immigration developed and extended. The life of the community took on a changed aspect with the influx of these new refugees, characterized by a higher cultural and material level than the old immigrants. The German-speaking Jews' standards and living patterns were quite different from those of their eastern brothers.

True, a small fraction of these refugees, 620 in number, found it necessary to pay tribute to the Jewish tradition of Argentinian agriculture. With the help of the ICA they built a new colony, "Abigdur," which has grown into a sizeable Jewish settlement. But the majority of the German-Jewish refugees did not go through the struggles of the Eastern European immigrants. Without exaggeration it can be said that almost all of them have succeeded in firmly establishing themselves in the various countries they chose to settle in.

Most of them had brought along handsome capital reserves of cash and valuables, and had solid business connections and valuable European experience. With truly German thoroughness and system they attacked the task of building a new home. This was a problem not only of climatic and economic adjustment, but also of determining the best possible methods of making use of existing opportunities. And in this respect they showed themselves to be true masters.

Thanks to them, the South American republics are going through a new founding period. Like mushrooms after a rain, much-needed industries sprang up. Everywhere, on land long idle, there arose factories, plants, workshops. Work was rationalized and methods modernized. Unexpected earning opportunities opened for the local population. Export trade began to flourish. And a number of finished and half-finished articles which up till very recently had had to be imported, are now manufactured locally.

As has been indicated, the latest Jewish immigration has considerably altered the physiognomy of the old Jewish settlements. Marked differences are perceivable in the mode of existence of the Jews. Unfortunately, however, the new Western immigrants remain spiritually separated from their Eastern predecessors. Despite the warmth, generosity, and hospitality with which the Eastern Jews have received their exiled brothers from Western Europe, so far it has proved impossible to achieve a national symbiosis. The heterogeneity of the two groups became strongly revealed soon after the influx of the German-speaking immigrants. Almost from the very first day, they began to isolate themselves behind a fatal wall of separation.

Practically everywhere the attempt to unify Eastern and Western Jews had failed. Only a sprinkling of national-minded (Zionist) German and Italian Jews have found the path leading to their Eastern brothers. The majority have remained loyal to the assimilationist ideology. They always have been and still are Germans, French, and Italians. They regard Nazism or fascism as a temporary disaster, which after the destruction of its ideologists will gradually subside. Especially among the German Jews there are patriots who consider themselves the bearers of German culture, who carefully preserve the purity of the German language, and who expect the Jewish problem to be solved by assimilation or social revolution.

However, apart from these ideological antagonisms, a correct relationship has been established between the new immigrants and the old settlers. In Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, and Bolivia, small groups of German- and Yiddish-speaking intellectuals have been formed, which seek a way to unity and mutual understanding. In Buenos Aires, one of such groups has achieved a great deal in the work of mutual rapprochement. There are some significant harbingers of eastern and western unity. Individuals among the German intellectuals and social leaders study Yiddish, read Yiddish newspapers, frequent the Yiddish theaters and join Yiddish cultural institutions.

In certain fields of activity the two branches of Jewry come into frequent and close contact. I am referring to the common political bodies which represent the communities, the relief organizations that take care of foreign Jews, and the constructive activity in the field of occupational readjustment. In all these fields there are practically no differences of opinion between the various groups and the spirit of separation is here completely absent.

The new immigration laws at present being promulgated by the South American governments provide for the immigration exclusively of productive elements. Persons with experience in agricultural work or skilled artisans have prospects of being admitted to these countries. For that reason, possibilities of entry are open for refugees trained in the European ORT schools and workshops with a view to settlement in South America.

The ORT movement in the South American countries is almost ten years old. The foundations for its constructive activities were laid in Buenos Aires in 1936. The pioneers of the ORT idea found here a very hard soil, an indifferent milieu, and an almost complete negation of the idea of social restratification. A number of psychological and material factors and certain inveterate prejudices in the minds of the Jewish masses stood in the way of the ORT ideas. It might have seemed that in a country with a Jewish agriculture, and a large organized and conscious Jewish proletariat, the ORT ideas would spread rapidly. But the reality was quite different.

ORT enthusiasts had to wage a difficult struggle against the indifference, lack of understanding, and even open hostility of certain social strata. Only staunch faith in the vital necessity of restratification of the Jewish social structure, and the conviction that ORT work was urgently needed in the South American communities as well as elsewhere, in the long run overcame resistance. The opening of the first ORT school in Buenos Aires in 1941 came as a genuine surprise to the community. Its workshops and classrooms, its technical equipment and model teaching staff, and particularly the number of its pupils, silenced the pessimists who had predicted its failure.

Buenos Aires was the beginning, the first practical demonstration and concrete expression of the ORT idea. The oral and written propaganda concerning the necessity of a social restratification penetrated ever deeper into the Argentinian provinces and the neighboring republics. The original notion that the ORT was "perhaps a valuable yet an unknown quantity" has long since disappeared.

What the ORT is, what it wants to be, and what are its aspirations, is no longer news. Ten years of untiring enlightenment and five years of practical activity have achieved a spiritual metamorphosis in the minds of the broad Jewish masses. And even the middle classes, in which the most archaic notion of social aristocracy is still alive, whose members cherish the dream of doctors' and lawyers' diplomas for their children, have radically revised their attitude toward the ORT.

The ORT has now gained full recognition in the South American countries; it occupies the most honorable place among the other leading world organizations, and its activities have developed into a movement. A net of ORT schools and trade courses is spread over the Latin American republics. In Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Santiago de Chile, San Paolo, and Rio do Janeiro, the local Jewish communities are proud of their ORT schools, where hundreds of young people of both sexes are given expert training in various technical fields. Also in La Paz and Cochabamba, two new centers of Jewish immigration in Bolivia, the ORT courses attract scores of young people.

The value of the ORT activities in South America is indisputable. This fact was particularly demonstrated at the first South American ORT congress in Buenos Aires in 1946. The reports of the delegates of the various countries clearly reflected the importance of ORT on the South American continent and outlined its role in the coming years. The newly elected leadership of the South American ORT Federation is right now waging a great organization and propaganda campaign in accordance with the resolutions adopted by the congress. The participation of South American ORT leaders in the first post-war world congress of the ORT in Paris is proof of a heart-felt interest in the general ORT movement. The co-ordination of the South American ORT Federation with the two ORT centers of the United States and Europe furthers the expansion of the ORT idea, extends its authority and raises it to be a most important factor in the social life of world Jewry.

The non-political character of the ORT, the fact that it stands outside any party doctrine, has won for it many friends and sympathizers in the Latin American countries. In the administrations of the regional ORT societies there sit in fraternal unity Eastern and Western Jews, Spanish-, German-, Italian-, French-, and Yiddish-speaking communal leaders, whose ideologies are often diametrically opposed and who belong to different parties. All of them are united by a common idea: that of reconstructing the Jewish people and making the broad Jewish masses productive.

In the Latin American countries, where the Jewish farmer struggling for his economic position suffers from a shortage of qualified labor, the service of a Jewish mechanic or electrician is a real piece of good luck. The ORT supplies that which the Jewish colonies lack most: the qualified specialist. This was best understood by the German-speaking immigrants: their participation in the ORT movement and their financial support of it have been most impressive.

Moreover, the ORT movement has proved an efficient weapon in the struggle against anti-Semitism. Its ideas about productivization serve as the best answer to anti-Semitic propaganda concerning the allegedly destructive Jewish spirit.

What is the present extent of anti-Semitism in South America? Has it been strengthened as a result of the new stream of immigrants from western Europe? Have these refugees improved or worsened the reputation of South American Jewry?

It is difficult to give a categorical answer to these questions; the situation differs in each country. There is a saying that wherever the Jews come en masse they bring anti-Semitism in their train; it accompanies them everywhere as a shadow of their fate. This has always been the case, even in so-called normal times.

The new immigration took place in conditions much worse than the previous one, and the new immigrants were up against an invisible enemy, the treacherous fifth column, whose task it was to destroy the exiles in their new homes. A flood of lies, false accusations, and ideological incitement, poured in from abroad and inundated the South American continent. Hundreds of special emissaries and thousands of local Nazi agents were exclusively engaged in waging a fight against the Jews. The main attack was directed against the German Jewish refugees as the most genuine foes of the Third Reich.

The Nazi poison had different effects on different types of people; those on the lowest level were most susceptible to it. In the first years of the war, when the Nazi-fascist military successes had reached their peak, anti-Semitic propaganda in the South American countries assumed a threatening aspect. Its flood rose in geometric ratio to the victories of the brown hordes on the various battle fronts. It threatened to engulf not only the new immigrants but also the communities of the old settlers.

Fortunately, our hemisphere realized the dangers of the Nazi imperialist appetite. Hitler's ambitious designs on South American territories, with their oil and other natural resources, opened the eyes of South American statesmanship. The disclosure of Germany's secret plans for invading Patagonia and capturing its oil fields aroused Argentinian public opinion and served as a salutary warning to the other Latin American countries. The fifth column and other Germanophiles tried to belittle the scandalous revelations, but without success: the evidence was too strong.

Brazil was the first to realize the seriousness of the situation and joined the Allies. With her entry into the war, the anti-Semitic propaganda there lost its roots. Uruguay soon followed her example, and broke diplomatic relations with the Third Reich. This little country, which is the democratic spearhead of South America, gave the most noble example of true progressivism. Its government decreed that racial persecution was a criminal offense. Dozens of Nazis spies and Gestapo agents were arrested and deported.

Semitic propaganda went through various phases of rise and decline. German capital and cultural influence are very strong in these two countries; especially their armies and navies are bound to Germany. Army officers and civil servants are thoroughly infected by the Nazi poison. The Argentinian and Chilean military were firmly convinced that the Germans would emerge victorious from the war. Even the defeat at Stalingrad did not change this opinion; nor did Allied invasion of the European continent open the eyes of the blinded Nazi friends among them. Only after the final collapse of the Reich and the suicides of Hitler and Goebbels did the Argentinian and Chilean militarists realize that they had backed the wrong horse, that the game was irretrievably lost. Germany's defeat deprived South American anti-Semitism of its main ideological and financial resources. Unfortunately, it is not extinct. To this very day strong and influential anti-Semitic organizations are active, in Buenos Aires and Santiago de Chile, using against the Jews the tried Nazi methods.

General Péron on the occasion of Rosh Hashana sent an official message of greeting to the Argentinian Jewish community, which came as a surprise to Jews and Gentiles alike. The content of this message was so interesting that it deserves to be quoted:

"The Argentine nation," writes Péron, "has always respected all religions and all ideologies, inasmuch as such respect is inherent in its basic law and constitutes the norm of its conduct as a civilized people. For that reason, as President of all the Argentinians, I cannot and will not permit any discrimination with regard to faith or ideas. For me the measure of a good or bad citizen is not the ideas he holds, but the behavior he manifests.

"As for me personally, I have sufficient proof not alone in words, but in acts, also. For the good of mankind I would wish all nations and all rulers to act according to an equally liberal criterion. For Catholics it is sufficient to observe the norm established by the Pope with regard to the Jewish problem.

"I, as President of the Argentine nation, join in the solemnities of the Jewish New Year, with complete accord, as regards both the joys and the sorrows of all citizens whatsoever. And on this occasion I am pleased to extend my greetings to all Jewish citizens."

Life Begins Anew At Minsk Beside Mass Graves

By Joseph Newman, In The New York Herald Tribune

Minsk — Minsk is just a Jewish memory. Once one of the world's largest centers of Jewry, Minsk is now one of the smallest. Eight of every ten Jews in Minsk perished in Nazi pogroms.

There were one hundred thousand Jews here before the war—about one-third of the total population of the city. Most of them now rest in mass graves—memorials to Nazi cruelty. These graves hold the relatives of many Jews who emigrated from Minsk years ago to New York, Philadelphia and other cities of the United States.

There were seventy-one synagogues in Minsk before the war. Now there is one. Its congregation of one thousand members is composed of remnants of broken families. One of them is the sole survivor of a family of thirty-five persons of three generations. Not far from the synagogue, which is in a small wooden house, is a gully about twenty-five feet deep. It is filled with daisies, dandelions and clover growing wild in a bed of weeds. A heavy pall of silence lies over earth broken only by shrill sounds of cicadas.

It was not so five years ago. On March 2, 1942, Nazi troops stormed the homes of five thousand Jews inclosed by barbed wire in a ghetto founded by the German invaders. They killed men, women and children in their homes or in gas wagons stationed outside. The victims were dragged by hooks through the streets and dumped into the gulch.

Others were driven to the edge of the gully, where they were mowed down by machine guns fixed on the opposite side. They toppled into a mass grave below, which is now marked by a gray stone obelisk — with the following inscription in both Yiddish and Russian letters: "In sacred memory of all time to five thousand Jews, who perished at the hands of ferocious enemies of mankind, the Fascist German murderers."

Two who survived this holocaust were staring silently into the gully when the group of visiting correspondents regained the ledge. Yokha Rubenchik, then sixteen years old, said she hid in a pit behind her home when the Nazis came for her family. During the night she escaped and joined partisans in the forest of Minsk.

Mrs. Gute Raskind, niece of Mrs. Celia Zipkin, of 560 Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, also managed to escape, but she lost her husband and three children. Mrs. Zipkin's sister was one of the victims of the 1942 massacre.

According to survivors, the Jewish population of Minsk which failed to get away before the Germans entered the city was exterminated in four major pogroms. In one of the first, in September, 1941, thirty-five thousand Jews lost their lives.

Twenty thousand who escaped before the Germans arrived joined partisans or were evacuated to eastern areas of the Soviet Union, in the Urals, Siberia and Central Asia. Most of them have now returned to Minsk to rebuild the community broken by the Nazis.

They have resumed their trades as tailors, shoemakers and their professions as teachers, doctors, musicians and artists. After an interruption of more than five years the Yiddish theater recently resumed productions with favorite jokes about Jews who emigrated to the United States.

Before Minsk was destroyed by the Germans the city was a prosperous garment center of Byelo-Russia. Now the relatively few surviving Jews are playing a leading part in restoration of the clothing industry.

The several Minsk shops which are operating once more look very much like establishments in Manhattan and Brooklyn, which employ about two hundred persons. On one side of the large square room are cloth cutters, and on another are scores of women seated at rows of humming sewing machines (not a few of which are Singers).

But there is one fundamental difference between the Minsk and New York cloakmaker, even though the latter or his relatives may have come from Minsk originally. The New York tailor often owns his shop. His Minsk counterpart never does. He belongs to a co-operative with other tailors and workers.

Boris Goldschmidt is chairman and Jacob Eiselman is manager of one of these Minsk clothing co-operatives, which are known as "artels". They are like scores of others in the New York clothing trade, alert and industrious.

Goldschmidt is a sturdy, middle-aged Jew who lost an eye while fighting with the Soviet Army. Eiselman is the intellectual type of tailor with pince-nez attached to a gold chain. Both of them have put their artel back on a sound profit-making basis. Their artel on the second floor of a wooden building was composed of 400 working members before the war. Now they have somewhat under one-third that number. Jews accounted for 93 per cent of the membership before the war. Now they are [illegible] per cent.

Thus, one of the chief problems in restoring an artel is finding and training cutters, fitters and seamstresses to replace those killed war. In time Goldschmidt and Eiselman hope to have their shop back to pre war strength.

The Minsk clothing artel is presently specializing in custom-made rather than ready-made suits, coats and dresses. If the client supplies his own material he can have a suit made for 240 to 290 rubles. If the material is supplied by artel the price is 700 rubles. Prices range from 250 to 300 rubles for a dress made from material supplied by the client.

Goldschmidt and Eiselman said they can make a suit in five days, but they are so rushed with orders presently that the customer must wait from two to four weeks to get his clothes.

The artel handles between 500 and 800 orders monthly and grosses two hundred thousand rubles monthly. It pays out eighty thousand rubles monthly in wages, forty thousand for electricity and 888 rubles rent. After meeting other obligations such as taxes and social insurance, the artel nets about fifteen thousand rubles monthly.

Twenty per cent of this net profit is distributed to members of the artel in cash in accordance with their seniority and scale of work. The rest is invested in medical facilities, social insurance, vacation and rest resorts for the members.

Goldschmidt said members work an eight-hour day, six days a week. Most are paid on the basis of piece work. A seamstress averages between 600 and 800 rubles monthly, but the more nimble-fingered have earned up to two thousand.

To join the artel a candidate files application. If it is accepted he or she is given a week's trial. Members of the artel then vote to admit or exclude a candidate. At present women have the controlling vote. They account for 75 per cent of the total membership.

Attempt To Re-Establish Zionist Groups

Unqualified condemnation of Irgun Zvai Leumi terrorist tactics in Palestine by nearly every principal speaker marked the recent Conference of European Zionists in Karlsbad, Czechoslovakia.

Joined with this was insistence that the exodus of Jews from Europe to Palestine must continue, an evident trend toward acceptance of partition. There was strong criticism of the British policy in Palestine.

Fifteen European countries were represented, including Poland, Rumania and Germany, plus "Jews in Berlin," but not Russia or the Russian zone of Germany. The object was to re-establish and consolidate Zionist organizations in Europe representing 3,000,000 remaining Jews, including those in Russia but excluding those in Britain. In eastern Europe, outside Russia, there are still 750,000 Jews of whom virtually all are said to wish to leave.

Irgunist terrorism was condemned by Dr. Nahum Goldmann and Dr. Moshe Sneh, members of the Executive of the Jewish Agency, and by Moshe Shertok, head of the Political Department of the Jewish Agency.

Mr. Shertok used such bitter terms that he brought disapproving murmurs from some of the younger Zionists.

Mr. Shertok said terrorist elements must be eradicated, since they were putting the Jewish people to shame and were endangering Jewry politically, economically and culturally. He also criticized influential Jews in the United States who, he said, encouraged irresponsible elements while running no risk themselves. He challenged any one in his audience to take the platform and justify the recent hanging of two British sergeants.

Dr. Goldmann critized the British policy of seeking to block the exodus of Jews to Palestine, arguing that these people could not stay in Europe in any circumstances and must go to Palestine if for no other reason than because they had no other home.

He said an important chapter in Arab-Jewish relations had ended and that cooperation was no longer possible. This was regretted by Jews because of their strong affection for Britain but it was the fault not of the Jews but of the British Labor Government, which had made more acute a situation than had been had since 1937, he said.

Bronx Zoo And Hebrew U. Swap Gifts

The Bronx Zoo and the Hebrew University, Palestine, have made a swap. Nothing pretentious. Just an American alligator for three species of skinks.

Skinks are members of the lizard family. Although slippery and hard to hold, the skink's body is glossy, not slimy, Brayton Eddy, curator of reptiles and insects at the Zoo, was quick to point out. The habitat of the species sent to the Zoo is the sandy wasteland of Asia Minor, a far cry from the Borough Beautiful.

The swap was a result of the visit two months ago of Dr. G. Haas, of the Hebrew University. The Zoo learned Dr. Haas had had some difficulty in purchasing an alligator and promptly crated one of their specimens and presented it to him as he boarded a ship to return home.

Dr. Haas' gift included eyed skinks, green-gray, six inches long and with markings like an eye covering its body; dwarf-legged skinks seven inches long, silvery-bronze with front legs an eighth of an inch long and hind legs a sixteenth of an inch, and a yellow-[illegible] skink, twelve inches long.

The skinks have been placed in a special glass-enclosed cage inside the main hall of the Reptile House. The eyed variety immediately became stage struck and slithered among the rocks in the cage.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

by Don Graham

In virtually every job, future developments must be constantly taken into account.

If you are working to a definite schedule, your main and perhaps only concern will be to keep up with it.

But if you have no such schedule to adhere to, don't fall into the error of thinking that it is not necessary to plan your work ahead. Every job can be done more efficiently by taking future requirements into account.

The advantages of doing so are many and important. To suggest a few:

It enables you to be better prepared for each task as you come to it.

It closes up gaps between operations—eliminates delays.

It gives you a clear picture of your whole job and of production rates which may be needed for reference at any moment.

While these are broad generalizations, I am sure that an analysis of your particular job will reveal many other specific advantages of "organizing for tomorrow".

Resettlement: The Freeland Program

By Leo Steinberg, Of The Freeland League For Jewish Territorial Colonization

For the first time in modern history a representative, popular government has asked the Jews to come and settle in its territory.

The invitation, made on February 14, 1947, by the Staaten, or Parliament, of Surinam (Dutch Guiana), was addressed to the Freeland league. But to all Jewry it now poses this question: Shall we denounce the offer as an attempt to distract our attention from the Palestine struggle; shall we, without getting the facts, decry the land as an uninhabitable hell hole; shall we set about proving that we are short of energy and cash and that this is no time for such a venture?—or shall we say: Let's see what the place is like, and meanwhile, God bless Surinam for giving us a chance.

At this writing we do not know what will be the final outcome of our present political negotiations with Surinam, or what will be the findings of our scientific commission. But we do know that only a mass settlement like the one contemplated in Surinam can make a substantial and durable contribution towards solving today's Jewish problem—the problem of helping more than a million Jewish survivors escape from liberated Europe.

What are the alternatives? It seems to us in Freeland that there is at present no machinery within world Jewry which can cope with the vastness of the task. It must be emphatically said again and again that Zionism is only a partial solution. The Jewish problem and the answer which Zionism gives have been moving farther and farther apart in recent years. On the one hand the problem of human rehabilitation has become more pressing; on the other the fight for Palestine has developed into a struggle for national sovereignty.

The Jewish Agency has rejected a belated British offer for 100,000 immigration certificates, because the offer was accomplished by a refusal to implement a Jewish Commonwealth. And the most militant groups within Zionism—those which are riding high in the headlines—are now stating explicitly that the war in Palestine is merely a war of liberation fought by Palestine-born Hebrews against a foreign occupying power. To them it is definitely not a struggle on behalf of persecuted Jews in the diaspora.

Whatever our hopes for Palestine we have to face the fact that Jews have not been entering in sufficient numbers, that they are not getting in today and that, even if the rate of immigrants rises, the problem of Europe's Jewish DP's will still stare us in the face.

There are Zionists who tell us that if only we can get the British out of Palestine the country will be wide open for all Jews who want a home. Statements like these are worse than wishful thinking. They represent deliberate demagogic over-simplification, for they ignore the determined opposition of the entire Moslem world. This opposition is a far more permanent factor in Palestine than the immigration quotas imposed by the mandatory power. The fact is that we are still very much of a minority in Palestine, that we cannot run the country so long as we are a minority, and that any power running it for us will be forced, like Britain, to restrict immigration to avoid outraging the Arabs.

The problem now goes to the United Nations—out of the frying pan into the fire. It is perfectly obvious that we cannot rely upon the United Nations to solve the Palestine problem along Zionist lines. For one thing, we have no voice in the General Assembly, while those who are definitely opposed to all Jewish immigration into Palestine command at least 13 votes — the Arab League, the Russian bloc and India. And if the question of how Palestine is to be governed comes before the General Assembly, only one thing is certain: the assembled nations there, those who still believe in the Atlantic Charter and those who throw covetous glances at the Arabs' oil, will not accord majority rights to Palestine's Jewish minority.

At any rate, none of this has anything to do with today's Jewish problem. The DP camps are still intact after two years of peace and, according to American army estimates, will continue so for years to come.

What of the IRO (International Refugee Organization), which the American delegation at the UN worked so hard to get started? No doubt the IRO is well-intentioned but it would be suicidal for us to leave the Jewish problem wholly in its hands. Even America became a member only on condition that its membership implied no change in the United States immigration quota — which Congress considers perfect as it is.

The IRO is due to start this summer. From then on it will negotiate with all the governments in turn, and ask them to be charitable and admit a few DP's. There can be little doubt that we shall then see a repetition of the degrading spectacle of Evian, the 1938 International Conference on Refugees. Once again the words that will dominate the discussions will be the words "no more". America will say, "We'll take no more than (say) 5,000," Australia will say, "We'll take no more than 2,000," and most of the others will say "no more—period."

The Freeland League submits that it is neither practical nor dignified to discuss the DP problem in terms of charity, as the IRO is getting ready to discuss it. Those 250,000 in the DP camps, and behind them the million misplaced Jews in the liberated countries, are human beings endowed with human form and faculty. It is almost inhuman to worry only about how to get rid of them and somehow dissipate the problem they create. Clearly, the moment we begin to relate their plight to the fact that the world is still full of undeveloped and unpopulated areas crying out for manpower, at that moment the DP problem ceases to be a total nuisance and becomes a positive asset. We can then go to the government of an empty country and say to them: "You have a land without people and we have people without land. Let's make a deal."

In its negotiations with other countries Freeland constantly stresses our common interests. Only where we can fully establish a community of interests can we hope to get the land we need and the chance to develop it peacefully without subsequent friction.

One other reason why we and not the IRO must take the lead in Jewish rehabilitation is that the international body is interested in the DP's only as population or [illegible]. We are interested in them as Jews. None of us wants to help [illegible] Hitler's victory by further smashing up the remnant of our European community into individual fragments. It is on Jewish communities that the continuity of all Jewish culture depends. And for that reason too we must now learn to think in terms of Jewish mass resettlement. In other words in backing Freeland we will be helping to save not only Jews but also Jewry and Judaism.

People sometimes tell us that our scheme is too ambitious and that this is not the time for it. There is no room here to answer their arguments in full, but this much can be said: Our first problem is not to find the manpower or the money. Both these will come when enough of us have made up our minds that Jewish mass settlement is urgently needed—as urgent as every other form of relief. And when we have decided on the essential purpose of the Freeland cause we will find that the plan is not only timely, but long overdue.

The Freeland League is not a political party and not a tight bureaucracy. It is a free association of Jews who believe that no single recipe will answer our problem, that you can't run a monopoly in Israel's salvation. We believe that Jewish life is precious and must be encouraged wherever it exists in Palestine, in the United States or other Jewish havens, and in that new place, Freeland's goal, which we must build for those who cannot share in one or the other.

In supporting Freeland we are not fighting for some narrow and exclusive dogma. We are, on the contrary, restoring that essential pluralism which alone can hope to answer a problem so complex as that of the Jews.

We are happy to know that it is labor Jewry, and branches of the Workmen's Circle in particular, which have so far given us the warmest support. On March 2nd, 1947 Freeland held a conference of Workmen's Circle representatives at the Capitol Hotel in New York. Ninety-six branches were represented and passed a resolution to support the project for Jewish mass settlement in Surinam.

Almost immediately after the close of the conference we received word from Bergen-Belsen, former Nazi death camp, that a Freeland group had formed there; from Rumania that our group had collected the signatures of 1,[illegible] Jews who wished to settle together in some new territory; from Poland that the resuscitated "Folkspartei" had incorporated the Freeland plan in their official party program.

With their goodwill and with the aid of young American Jews as new pioneers in a new land we can now lay the foundations of a new Jewish life and bury that attitude of [illegible] skepticism which led Israel Zangwill to tell the story of the Jews as a history of missed opportunities."

This article is from The Workmen's Circle Call.

COMMANDER GETS BNAI BRITH AWARD

Gen. Mark Clark, commander of the Sixth Army, received an award for humanitarian work in behalf of war sufferers of all races, colors and creeds at a dinner in his honor given at Oakland, Calif., by Alameda County's three Bnai Brith lodges.

The general, accepting the award "for the American men and women and those of our allies," voiced the hope that the U.S. would "do its part in bringing displaced persons out of the misery of Europe and into the sunshine of democracy."

He repeated his charge that "the insidious forces of another totalitarian dictatorship" were increasingly active. Communism's forces, he added, were "acting in some cases openly and with the sanction of foreign governments."

Dutch Girl In U.S. To Study Welfare

A young Dutch woman who escaped a Nazi detention camp during the war to study social work in Switzerland has arrived in the United States to continue her studies on a scholarship granted by the National Council of Jewish Women.

She is Carla Polak, twenty-seven. She will specialize in child welfare at the George Warren Brown School of Social Work at Washington University in St. Louis. On completion of her training, as with seven previous National Council welfare work scholarship winners, Miss Polak will return to her native country to assist in the rehabilitation program of the Jewish community.

When the Nazis entered Antwerp in 1940, Miss Polak was a volunteer social worker in the Antwerp Y.W.C.A. In 1942, to evade mass deportation into Germany, she fled to unoccupied France. She was intercepted by pro-Nazi French police and sent by cattle car to a detention camp at Riversaltes in the French Alps.

During three months at the camp, Miss Polak volunteered her services to the French and international welfare groups which were permitted to work there. Shortly after Hitler swept across France, the underground spirited her into Switzerland. Miss Polak studied at the Geneva School of Social Work until 1945 when she returned to Antwerp. Here she learned of the National Council social work scholarship, for which she applied and was accepted.

Eleven more European women are scheduled to arrive in the United States in the next two months to begin scholarships in social work, nutrition, medical research and nursery school education under the Council program to meet the shortage of skilled social workers in Europe. The scholarship students will come from France, Italy, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Greece, to attend graduate schools of Pennsylvania, Tulane, Washington, Western Reserve, McGill and Toronto universities.

Urges Countries Take DP For Own Sake

The United Nations must undertake immediate concrete action to solve the problem of 250,000 uprooted and homeless Jews in Europe, and the United States and other countries must open their doors to displaced persons, David Rosenstein, chairman of the American delegation to the World ORT Union Conference in Paris, declared in New York.

Mr. Rosenstein was authorized by the Organization for Rehabilitation Through Training to make a seventy-day tour of European displaced persons' camps.

In an interview at the ORT's New York office, 212 Fifth Avenue, Mr. Rosenstein explained that the most pressing problem today was "the problem of resettlement."

"I spoke to hundreds and hundreds of Jews in displaced persons' camps," he said, "and it isn't propaganda that they want to go to Palestine. They do. The Jews studying under ORT feel that the Holy Land is the only place where they can make a future for themselves."

He asserted that the ORT's job in Europe was the vocation training of refugees, adding that the ORT schools and Joint Distribution Committee projects "have turned apathy and despair into courage and hope."

"From what I saw of the quality and potential of these people," Mr. Rosenstein said, "any country that admits them will be the gainer, economically and spiritually. I was utterly astonished by the eagerness with which DP's welcome opportunities for vocational and general schooling, as preparation for effective resettlement.

"The ORT pupils are hungry. The ORT teachers, most of whom are DP's, are hungry; still they keep up the work. Some students walked five miles each way to get to the ORT school every day. That kind of spirit evokes admiration."

In his tour, Mr. Rosenstein travelled through France, England, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and Germany.

RABBI RECEIVES U.S. MEDAL OF FREEDOM

Rabbi Nathan Witkin, Army-Navy representative of the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB) in Panama, since 1947, was awarded the U.S. Medal of Freedom in Panama for "exceptionally meritorious services" by Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, commanding general of the Caribbean Defense Command and Panama Canal Department, in a ceremony held at his office at Quarry Heights. JWB is the authorized agency to serve the spiritual, recreational, and morale needs of Jewish men in the armed forces. The Medal of Freedom is the second highest award for war service conferred on civilians by the President of the United States.

The citation accompanying the award, read by Brig. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, chief of staff of the CDC, in the presence of Rabbi Witkin's family and the General's staff, said:

"Rabbi Nathan Witkin, American civilian, rendered exceptionally meritorious services to the United States Army as Field Representative of the Jewish Welfare Board for the entire Caribbean Defense Command. His superior judgment, fairness, honesty and integrity have proved a substantial contribution to the successful accomplishment of the mission of the Panama Department and to the Caribbean Defense Command and thus to the success of the United Nation's war effort."

THE YEAR 'ROUND WONDERLAND

Center To Get Torah Scroll Saved By Bishop

The Forest Hills Jewish Center, at Sixty-ninth Avenue and Kessel Street, will lay the cornerstone for its new million-dollar center and synagogue, at Sixty-ninth Avenue and Queens Boulevard, New York, on September 21. Mayor William O'Dwyer is expected to attend the ceremony. That evening, there will be a fund-raising dinner for the new building, at which Rabbi Ben Zion Bokser will officiate.

On the preceding Saturday evening, a sacred Torah scroll, which had been saved from Nazi destruction in Ujhely, Hungary, in 1944, by a Roman Catholic Bishop, the Most Rev. Payer, will be presented to the congregation by Lawrence Lipson. Mr. Lipson is a doll manufacturer who lives at 110-02 Sixty-eighth Drive, Forest Hills. He is a native of Ujhely and is a member of the Ujhely Society in New York, a number of whom are affiliated with the Forest Hills Jewish Center. This society sent a gift of money to Ujhely to aid in the reconstruction after the war.

In gratitude, the Jewish survivors of Ujhely sent to the Ujhely Society in New York one of the eighteen sacred Torah scrolls which had been saved from the Nazis and it is this historic scroll which is being presented by Mr. Lipson to the new Forest Hills Jewish Center.

The story of the scroll was learned from Mr. Lipson, who said that when the Nazis overran Hungary, in 1944, the Jewish people of Ujhely greatly feared the destruction of their Torah scrolls, some of which were of great antiquity. A hurried conference was held late one night between the Jewish leaders of the city and the Roman Catholic Bishop, who agreed, personally, to help them save the scrolls.

Bishop Payer took the eighteeen scrolls and hid them under one of the city's theaters, where they remained until the war was over.

U.N. PALESTINE REPORT CONFIRMS PRINCIPLES OF JUSTICE

By Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, President of The Canadian Jewish Congress

The problem of our people is not separate from, but a part of the general problem of mankind. Not only we, but almost all of the nations of the earth live to-day in uncertainty; in international politics suspicion and fear are the dominant motives.

The Palestine situation has been symbolic of the inability of the nations to come to grips with the exigencies of these post-war days. On the eve of the New Year we find a confirmation of our faith when we see the United Nations, an instrument fashioned for world peace, courageously formulating the terms of a solution to this most complex problem.

Its Special Committee on Palestine a few weeks ago presented a report, the main features of which are heartening to Jewish aspirations and confirm the principles of justice on which these hopes were founded. It is to the glory of the people of Canada that its representative on this commission participated in these fateful recommendations.

Forty Arabs, Jews, Have Fine Time

Moshe Levy Nahum Mukhtar of the, Yemenite Jewish quarter of Jaffa, who is sometimes called the "King of the Yemenite Jews," had forty Arabs and Jews at a peace-making feast in his house at Jaffa, Palestine.

The Arab guests provided sheep, which were slaughtered before a large crowd on the Tel Aviv-Jaffa border where Arab-Jewish rioting recently broke out. The host provided rice and other dishes and one of his two wives cooked the mammoth meal.

Mr. Mukhtar has lived in Palestine forty-four years. He is the only Jewish member of the Jaffa municipal council.

The Arab uprising in 1936 and the recent rioting began in Mr. Mukhtar's district, an overcrowded slum district. At the party Yemenite Jews and their Arab neighbors from the Manshieh quarter swore that they would not sanction any more peace-breaking.

The United Program
FEDERATED COUNCIL OF PALESTINE INSTITUTIONS—
VAAD LEUMI (National Council of Palestine Jews)

100 Philanthropic and Educational Institutions—ORPHANAGES, HOMES for the AGED, HOSPITALS, RELIEF ORGANIZATIONS, SCHOOLS and YESHIVOTHS.

The institutions render indispensable service to the Palestine Community including the refugees.
The minimum budget for the current year — $2,500,000.

THE PLIGHT OF THE INSTITUTIONS IS VERY GREAT. Local support, which was considerable, has almost been completely eliminated, IN THESE MOST DIFFICULT DAYS IN THE LIFE OF THE YISHUV.

WE NEED YOUR HELP

Send your contribution to:

Mr. George Salomon, Treasurer,
Federated Council of Palestine Institutions,
486 St. Catherine St. West,
Montreal 2, Canada.

RESPOND GENEROUSLY. THE ORPHANS, THE AGED, THE SICK AND THE NEEDY MUST BE TAKEN CARE OF. European centres of learning are destroyed. Palestine is the largest reservoir of true Jewish scholarship and Torah knowledge. THE YESHIVOTHS MUST BE MAINTAINED.

GIVE NOW. THE NEEDS ARE URGENT. TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE. Best wishes for the New Year.

Report On The Hebrew University

In a report to Allan Bronfman, National President of the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University, H. M. Caiserman, the General Secretary of the Canadian Jewish Congress, who has just returned from an extended study tour of Palestine, reported that the Hebrew University "exceeds all the expectations of its friends for its impressiveness and the extent of its studies. I was in Palestine when it opened in 1925. I knew the plans and dreams of the founders. I can honestly state that the 1947 reality far exceeds these plans.

"More than 1200 students including hundreds from the United States and the British Commonwealth are now enrolled in this institution which was founded solely as a research institute. The magnificent open air amphitheatre is an inspiring centre of adult education and of inspiration to Jewish scholars everywhere. There has never been a Jewish library to compare with the collection of half a million volumes on Mount Scopus.

"The scientific institutes to which Professor Einstein has given his name are among the most highly rated in the world and the humanities faculties are staffed with majestic names of Jewish learning. I personally had the experience of being treated at the Hadassah Hospital on this present visit. If I should ever need treatment, I would wish to receive it in that institution.

"During these difficult days for the Jewish community of Palestine the Hebrew University is a source of confidence and of strength. It is a testimony to the ability of the race in Palestine to create not only a homeland of freedom, but a refuge for the Jewish spirit which has been in exile not less than the Jewish people. It is restoring the ancient Jewish heritages to its rightful place in Jewish life and is enriching it further yet for the generations to come.

"As I walked through the magnificent buildings and thrilled with pride at what I saw and what I felt, I was even more proud to recall that among those who are making possible this vast Jewish initiative are a considerable number of Canadians, led by you, Mr. Bronfman. I know how much energy you have devoted to making the Hebrew University known among the Jews of Canada and to enlisting support for it. I am convinced that if each of them could see, as I saw, the reality on Mount Scopus, your task would be much lighter."

Urge Trade School In N.Y. For Immigrants

The [illegible] convention of the [illegible] Council of America called on Jewish agencies in Europe to give a religious upbringing in accordance with the dying wish of their martyred parents to Jewish orphans in the displaced persons camps.

The resolution also asked the refugee division of the council to establish a religious reception center and trade school in New York for immigrant youths from Europe. These schools would be similar to the institutions that the organization has undertaken to build in Palestine.

Other resolutions called on the Agudath Israel youth movement to train "pioneer groups" of Orthodox American Jewish youths who would go to Palestine to help in its religious upbuilding, to help establish an Orthodox daily Hebrew newspaper in Palestine and to grant three scholarships annually for intensive study in Palestine to members who display "unusual ability or Jewish leadership."

CLASS IN COOKERY

FRUIT CAKE

one cup sugar
one-half cup butter
two cups sifted flour
one-quarter cup corn syrup
two eggs
one teaspoon baking soda
one-half cup sour milk
one whole orange
one cup raisins

Mix sugar and butter thoroughly, and add corn syrup. Then add well-beaten eggs, and mix. Add orange and raisins which have been put through a mincer, with some nuts, if desired. Sift flour and baking soda three times, and add flour mixture to first mixture alternately with sour milk. Bake in a pan, buttered and lined with wax paper, in a 350-degree oven for thirty minutes, or slightly longer, until cake is reddish-brown.

Mrs. E. Wisenthal,
3111 Westmount Boulevard, Montreal.

MEXICAN FUDGE

one cup brown sugar
one-quarter cup boiling water
two cups white sugar
one cup evaporated milk
four tablespoons butter
one cup chopped nuts grated rind of an orange pinch of salt

Put the brown sugar into a heavy frying pan and place over low heat, stirring constantly. When melted to a light brown, add the boiling water. Then boil until sugar is dissolved and syrup forms. Add the white sugar, evaporated milk, and pinch of salt, and cook until it reaches 240 degrees, or it forms a firm ball when tested in cold water. Add orange rind and remove from heat. Do not stir after removing from stove. Drop in the butter, and let stand until cool. Then beat, using electric beater if possible. As soon as the mixture starts to grain, or loses its sheen, add the chopped nuts. Let it cool. When it can be handled, knead and form into rolls. Let set on waxed paper, and cut into one inch pieces.

ACCORD ON CASE FOR HOMELAND IMPRESSES U.S. OFFICIALS

An aspect of the two reports to the United Nations by its Special Committee on Palestine that has impressed high officials in Washington is that both the majority and the minority groups concede great merit to the case for a Jewish homeland, says Arthur Krock, in the New York Times.

This is implicit in three recommendations that are common to both reports; that a Jewish state be established; that a liberal quota of Jewish immigration into the area be authorized; and that, after a transition period, the British mandate over Palestine shall terminate.

The spokesmen of the Arab world have contended, and many outside it have expressed or indicated agreement, that there was no good case for a Jewish homeland in Palestine, whether the argument advanced was ethical, theological, sentimental, political or economic. But now the representatives of ten nations, differing widely in origins and native institutions, have come to the contrary conclusion after careful inquiry, some of it at first hand.

To the high officials whom these facts have impressed the national roster of the majority and minority groups on the committee is especially significant. The countries represented are Canada, Czechoslovakia, Guatemala, the Netherlands, Peru, Sweden and Uruguay (the majority) and India, Iran and Yugoslavia (the minority).

This list includes several kinds of democracies; former colonial areas that were granted, or forcefully won, their independence from empires; countries within the Soviet sphere of influence, and countries that have resisted efforts to draw them into that sphere. "If this doesn't constitute world opinion, what would?" asked an official who is among those in Washington who consider this aspect of the reports outstanding.

As he and others of like mind summarize what is implied in the documents, this is their message to the fifty-five members of the United Nations:

The case for a Jewish homeland in Palestine has undeniable merit. The world owes sanctuary and some form of independent citizenship to those Jews who want to migrate there. Measures to bestow these blessings should be taken at once. We differ, 7-3, on what the most appropriate and effective measures should be, our differences arising over the method best calculated to preserve the rights of the Arabs and keep peace between the Arab and Jewish areas. But both have sovereign rights in Palestine.

The United States officials who make this interpretation of the reports, and estimate this as their fundamental importance, will have much to say about the development of this country's ultimate policy for a settlement of the problem of Palestine. And they see in their evaluation of the two documents a prospect that henceforth the problem can be dealt with by Washington authorities without a handicap that has afflicted it up to now. This handicap is the belief of many, here and abroad, and especially voiced in the British Parliament, that local American politics has been the chief animator of the executive and Congress in advocating a Jewish homeland and increased immigration quotas in Palestine.

As these officials view the situ-

Denies Ban On Z.O.A. Paper

The Palestine Government issued an official statement denying that a ban had been imposed upon "The New Palestine News Reporter," official organ of the Zionist Organization of America, as reported in a recent issue of that publication.

At the offices of the Zionist Organization of America, the statement was received with some degree of skepticism.

"While this denial is gratifyng," declared the 'News Reporter's' edtor, "it does not explain why our paper has not been reaching Palestine subscribers and institutions for the past four months. Our subscribers there inform us that the last issue of 'The New Palestine News Reporter' received by them was dated April 14. Since that time not a single issue published has reached them; apparently they are being held up by the military censor. There may be no official ban," he concluded, "but the unofficial ban seems to be just as effective."

A father looks upon his young son . . and hopes that when the time comes he will have the money to send him to University.

The man who lives in a crowded city wishes that some day he may own a few broad acres where there's room and freedom . . And still another hopes to see the day when he can stop working and take things easy . . . .

Yes . . . The hopes of men are as varied as their faces. But wishing alone isn't good enough. All ambitions and dreams depend on one thing—the money to carry them out.

THE KOSHER SALAD & COOKING OIL

For many years chefs, in all parts of Canada, have shown a preference for MAZOLA — connoisseurs of delicious salad dressings or mayonnaise appreciate the fine quality of Mazola. Mazola, made from sun-ripened corn, mixes easily with other necessary ingredients and imparts a distinctive and delightful flavour to salad dressings. Mazola is unequalled for deep frying or sauteing and is most economical to use, as it can be used over and over again without carrying the odor or flavour of one food to another.

Order MAZOLA from your Grocer in 1 or 5 lb. sealed tins.
